1968 FLIGHT

EDSEL FORD HIGH SCHOOL
20601 Rotunda Drive
Dearborn, Michigan
VOLUME XIII

EF student can emerge from crowd, become individual

The student enters the school, lost in the maze of EF halls, lost in the mass of students around him. The world that surrounds him could swallow him up if it were not for his freedom, his individualism. He sees that Edsel Ford students are one large mass when they are singing "Hail to the Varsity" and the alma mater, and when they are cheering the Thunderbirds to victory -- or sympathizing with them in their defeat. Edsel Ford unites these 1750 students. But will the student be swallowed up, absorbed by the crowd and the school? Edsel Ford gives him a chance: to express himself in his academic life, to pursue his interests in extracurricular activities, to contribute to Edsel Ford, to become part of Edsel Ford, to let Edsel Ford become part of him. At Edsel Ford the student can emerge from the crowd, can become an individual.

Student sorts

out theories, opinions to accept or reject

In the classroom the student exercises his greatest freedom: to accept or reject ideas. The student is presented with theories, philosophies, opinions. It is his responsibility to consider, evaluate, and take action. In repairing an engine, frosting a cake, singing a madrigal, performing an instrument solo, writing an article for the Bolt, balancing an equation, dissecting a frog, pronouncing unfamiliar words in a foreign language, or printing a linoleum block design, the individual reinforces the abstract fabric of ideas and ideals with the concrete certainties of fact and experience. But these experiences teach more than just practical skills. The Edsel Ford student learns about himself, his fellow students, his teachers, and his school. He sorts out the knowledge presented to him and weighs its worth. He accepts or rejects, forgets or retains, molding himself into an individual that cannot be swallowed up by the crowd.

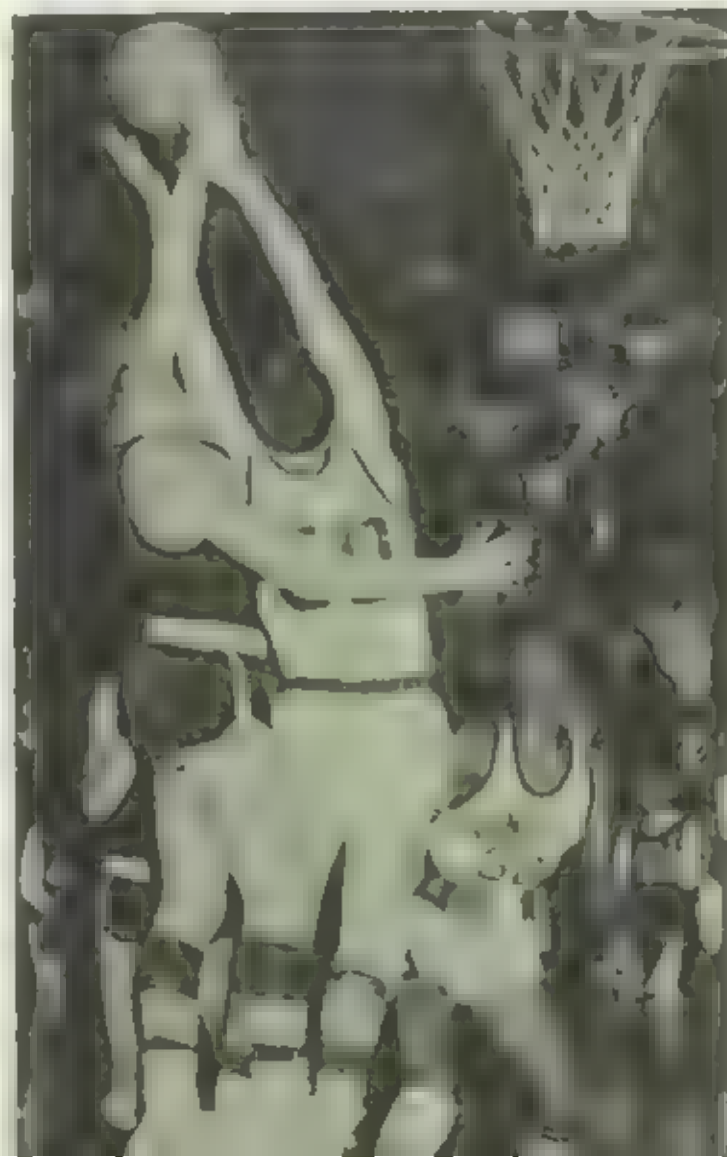

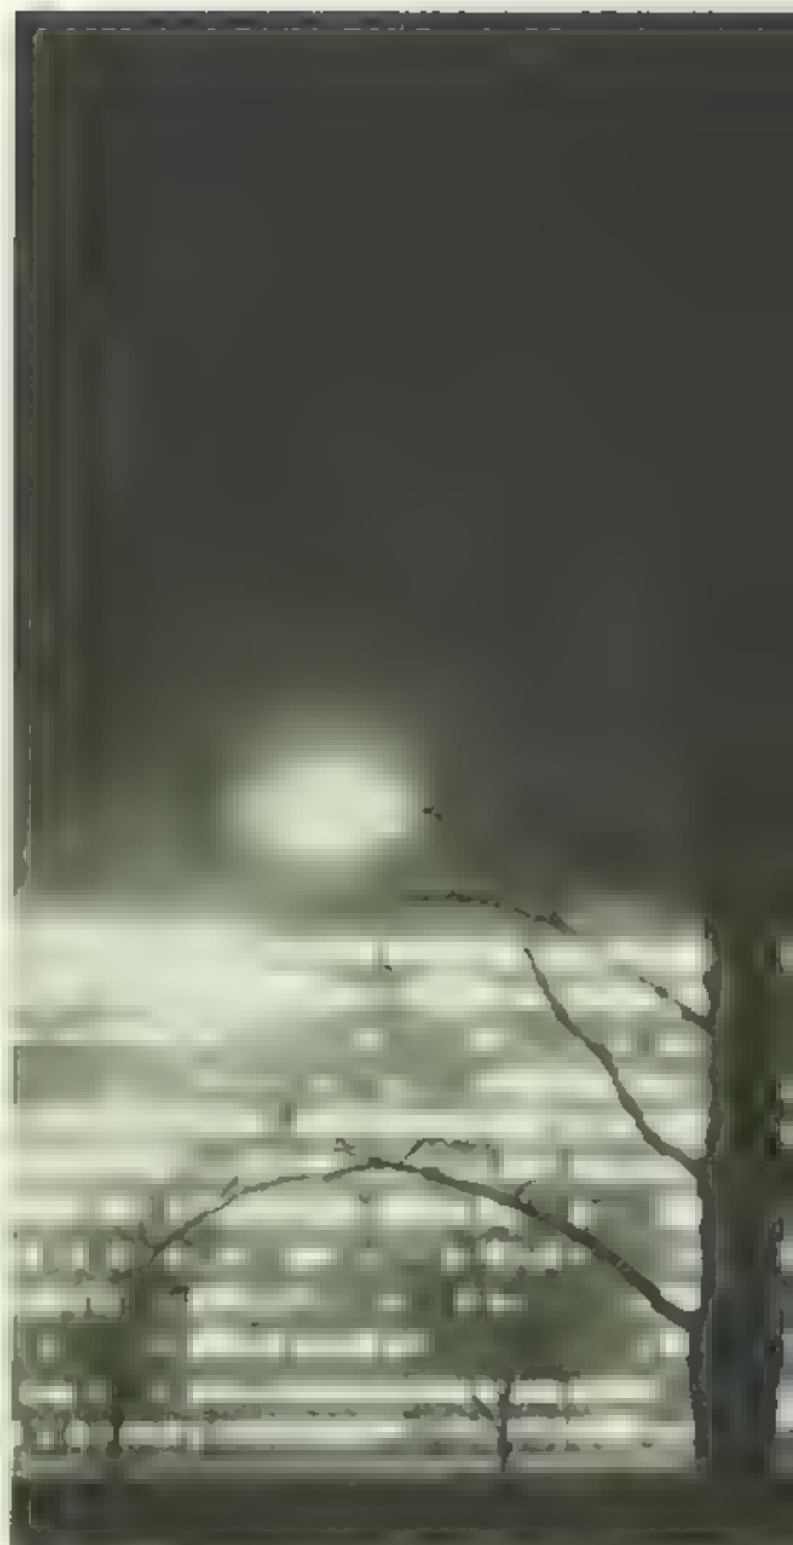

Individual pursues interests after school

The bell rings at 3.30, and many students head for the doors, but many others remain behind to learn more. In extracurricular activities, the student is given a chance to pursue his own interests and share his experiences with others. He learns the meaning of accomplishing a goal through group cooperation. In making hundreds of gladiolus flowers for a homecoming float, decorating a window for Christmas, selling yearbooks, attending a chapel service, playing field hockey, winning the intramural soccer championship, practicing cheerleading, running relays at a track meet, or undergoing an embarrassing initiation procedure the student learns what it is to be part of a group and to take on responsibilities voluntarily. In rehearsing for Superman, painting the scenery for Ten Little Indians, marching across the football field during half time, or scoring the winning basket each student contributes what he can to Edsel. The school cannot absorb him, for he makes Edsel Ford what it is. He molds himself as he molds EF.

Edsel student remains individual in community

Leaving the school at night, the student is more than just a citizen of Edsel Ford. He is a citizen of his community. Dearborn awaits him outside the door. Will he be lost in its maze of streets? The Edsel Ford student will have learned his lesson well, for beyond the building called Edsel Ford, Edsel is still a part of the students. EF prepares him for what awaits and builds a bridge for him to the outside world. His academic life prepares him to make his unique contribution to the world. In his extracurricular activities he learns that cooperation leads to the achievement of a goal. In sports he has learned to accept victory and defeat. In the community he learns more. He continues to analyze, accept or reject, retain or forget, pursue his own interests, offer his unique contribution, and mold himself. In the outside world of two hundred million other Americans, the student can still be an individual, for even this massive crowd is only a conglomeration of many individuals.

Staff and Academic Life

Administration

Schreiber becomes Edsel's new principal

Lawski leaves Edsel Ford, takes job as assistant superintendent

Typing orders for school supplies is a part of Mrs. Vera Bogosi's job

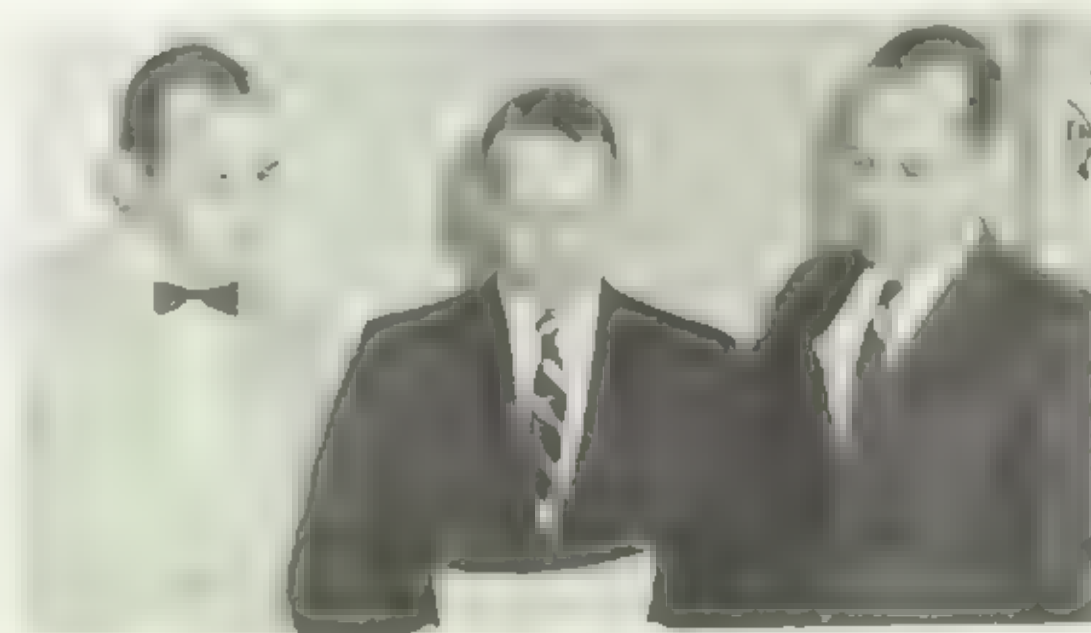

Typewriters clicking, telephones ringing, and people scurrying about attending to their duties are all a part of the school office. In the midst of the activity, an unfamiliar face can be seen heading Edsel Ford's administration. It is the face of Mr. Frederick Schreiber, the new principal. He was appointed to this position after the promotion of the former principal, Mr. Anthony Lawski, who has now become assistant superintendent for the Board of Education.

Even though he is aided by Assistant Principals Ross Slabaugh and Robert Young and a computer, Mr. Schreiber has found that the size of Edsel Ford requires a major adjustment after his previous position as principal of O.L. Smith Junior High School. He formerly had one assistant principal, an office staff of two, and only 42 teachers under him. At Edsel Ford he has two assistant principals, five office workers, and a faculty of 106.

Edsel Ford's size also means more clubs, and each club has its own financial problems. In an effort to become better acquainted with the clubs' money-making projects, such as car washes, dances, hay rides, and candy and ticket sales, he has been meeting with club advisers throughout the year. By doing this he attempts to keep the school running smoothly each day, and at the same time, he looks forward to the future.

Mr. Schreiber believes in setting high goals, and he has high hopes for the students of Edsel Ford. His "impossible dream" is to graduate a class with no failures and no drop-outs!

Assistant Principals Robert Young and Ross Slabaugh look over a student's records with Principal Frederick Schreiber

"May I help you?" asks Mr. Frederick Schröber. As EF's new principal, he has acquired new problems to solve, questions to answer, and decisions to make. But each day these challenges seem less insurmountable.

TOP: "Harrowing" is the word which best describes Mr. Ross Slabaugh's job of scheduling 1,890 EF students. BOTTOM: Undismayed by an avalanche of phone calls, Mrs. Michels, Mr. Slabaugh's secretary, glances up at the activity in the General Office.

Operational Staff

Custodians strive for goal of efficiency

Shiny floors, spotless windows show results of staff's hard work

Undisturbed by the surrounding hodgepodge of extension cords, clipboards, and records, Mr. Charles Muncatchy concentrates on arranging a work schedule for the following day

A secretary is trained to be the epitome of efficiency, but she is seldom unresponsive to offers of aid. Help with the "little things" is given by Jo Merzcyński, a student, and appreciated by Mrs. Dorothy Kurtz.

That high school students are naturally messy is a fact which Mr. Don Winnicki has learned while performing his duties. Spilled ketchup and crumbs are among the tidbits he wipes off lunch tables.

Rearranging crooked rows of chairs in one of fifty-six similarly disordered classrooms, Mr. Emil Grenke marvels at the amount of energy possessed by E.F.'s fidgety students.

Wiping desks Mrs. June Blosser reflects can be an interesting job when attacked with imagination and vigor. Crumpled math papers and smudgy fingerprints provide insight into the habits of E.F. students.

New anthology emphasizes universality

One finds it easier to appreciate another's problems when he himself has experienced them. After three unsuccessful attempts at building a Roman arch, Mr. Ralph Hasbrian receives assistance from sophomore Dennis Bay. Mr. Hasbrian grins triumphantly when the wobbly structure finally stands upright.

of human experiences

Stuart carries on correspondence, heads group to revise textbook

And Yet, Entirely Different

The title of the new 10B anthology is based on the concept that the universal human experiences—growing up, establishing one's role, living with others, facing and solving problems, deciding upon and pursuing goals, meeting disappointments, facing death, and leaving a legacy — are stimuli to which every person responds differently.

In selecting stories to illustrate each of the universal experiences, Mrs. Bessie Stuart carried on a huge amount of correspondence. The revisionary group, which Mrs. Stuart headed, spent part of summer vacation in Chicago to prepare the new anthology.

And yet, the new anthology is not as entirely different as it may at first seem. It merely offers the student a chance to better conduct his own life, to learn through indirect experience.

Rereading her analysis of a composition's tone color for her listening assignment, Linda Dynarski finds that she has one solo instrument left to identify Using some of her free time to search for flaws in a fellow debate student's argument, Marie Ackley checks the validity of a point with Mr. Gordon Coxbrane.

Social Studies

Forum Club sparks students' interest

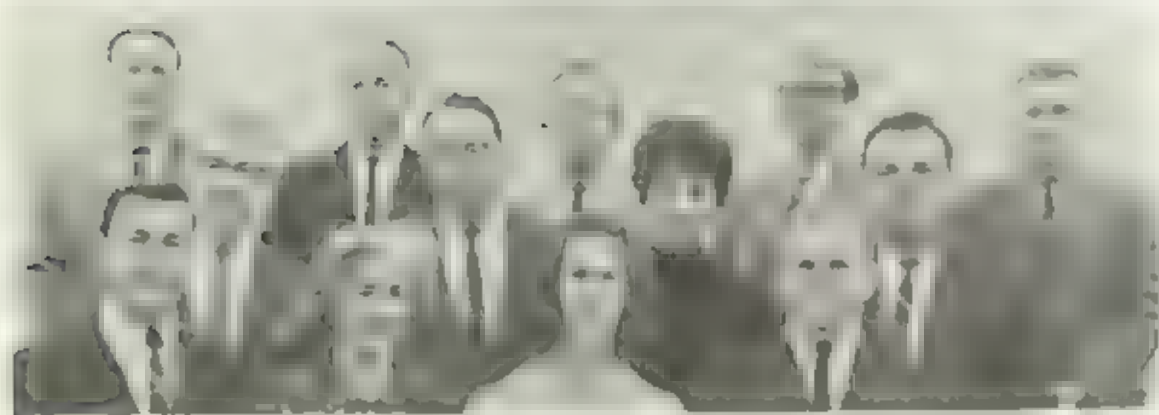

Students discuss current events, issues at meetings

What will be the outcome of the War on Poverty? How effective are UN peacekeeping efforts?

The newly-formed Current Events Forum offers students a chance to discuss such current political and moral issues. The Forum illustrates an important concept in the Social Studies Department: that "history" is more meaningful when students relate past events to current events.

Several different techniques are being employed to help students relate past and current events. Readings in the Scott-Foresman series, "Problems in American History," permit students to acquaint themselves with a certain situation and then to evaluate its causes and effects. "Social drama" and research projects are other frequently-used tools.

Whether the issue is the War on Poverty or UN peacekeeping missions, interested students are urged to deepen their understanding of the world in which they live by relating past and current events.

SOCIAL STUDIES DEPARTMENT. FRONT ROW: Mr. Roger DeSbeller (Assistant Reserve Football Coach), Miss Grace Kachaturoff (Department Chairman and National Honor Society Adviser), Mrs. Judy Simmons. SECOND ROW: Mr. Neville Walker (Assistant Varsity Football Coach), Mr. Robert Dillingham, Miss Sue Nagy, Mr. Roland Mercer. THIRD ROW: Mr. Jon Davis (Varsity Baseball Coach and Reserve Football Coach), Mr. Ronald Hiphiss, Mr. Thomas Barrett, Mr. Robert Dalton (Student Government Adviser), Mr. Patrick Duly.

Social studies isn't just history; current affairs are an integral part of the course. Ken Wynn and Pat Lange contrast Time's picture of contemporary U.S. culture with the primitive cultures, such as the Andamanese, Pygmy, Hopi, and Buganda, that they have studied.

After studying a classroom bulletin board on the Pygmy culture, Judy Kinnell, Kevin Dwyer, and Becky Barker begin their assignments. They have found that originality characterizes a good bulletin board.

Supplementary materials provide deeper insight into current and past social problems by broadening the base of the student's understanding. Mallory Simpson and Norma Barros explore sources offered in the classroom.

Human Relations

Increased enrollment creates need

Guidance Department adds four counselors to maintain

Teaching Human Relations classes, keeping attendance records, supplying seniors with college and job information, and advising students on classes to take are only some of the counselor's duties. Mr. Ronald Monson takes a moment to talk to Dale Kruse about his courses for the next semester for more counselors

The student's legacy — knowledge — is the result of many thousands of human experiences. Edsel Ford's philosophy seeks to help the student use this knowledge in his life. An important instrument in achieving this goal is the guidance program.

Because individual counseling is one of the keys to the guidance program, the ratio of pupils to counselor is small. To correct the imbalance caused by large classes, two new counselors have joined Edsel Ford's Guidance Department this year, Mr. Ronald Doherty and Mr. Ronald Monson. The new counselors share more than a common first name. Both are former social studies teachers; Mr. Doherty taught at Stout last year and Mr. Monson at Edison.

The Guidance Department has even borrowed teachers from other departments in an attempt to restore the proper ratio of students per counselor. Mr. Ralph Cornell has a Human Relations I course sandwiched in among three science classes. Mr. Alan Dawson has switched from the Science Department to the Guidance Department this year.

Still another change — Mr. Ford Haskins has replaced Mr. James Shader, now Consultant for Adult Education, as Department Chairman.

Human Relations classes meet only two or three times a week, but students must still work hard for their 1-4 unit of credit. Craig Beach adds one more mark to his record as he turns in a paper to Mr. James Irwin.

HUMAN RELATIONS DEPARTMENT. FRONT ROW: Mr. Ronald Doherty, Mrs. Victoria Stock, Mr. Arthur Bonazza, Mr. Dale Kuntzman, Mr. Rudolph Skulack, Mr. Ford Haskins (Department Chairman). SECOND ROW: Mr. Ronald Monson, Mrs. Almarie Kaufman, Mr. Addison Dixon, Mrs. Jan Flegle, Mr. Joseph DiFranco, Mr. Matthew Zippie, Mr. Alan Dawson, ABSENT: Mr. James Irwin, Mr. Harry Adams, Mr. Ralph Cornell.

Department gains three new members

Modern approach continues to win many math 'battles'

In the "battle" between the two approaches to mathematics - traditional and modern - "modern math" seems to be winning many skirmishes. Book 3 in the Illinois series is now being used in two junior classes. An experimental sophomore course in Illinois math has been set up to compare the achievement of students who were in the Scott-Foresman program to students involved in the Illinois program.

Even in modern math, two plus one still equals three new teachers in the math department this year. Mrs. Lorraine Van Dette returned to Edsel after spending one semester at Stout. Miss Allison Fischer now teaches math and science, and Miss Beverly Salancy, who formerly taught at Fordson, joined EF's faculty this year.

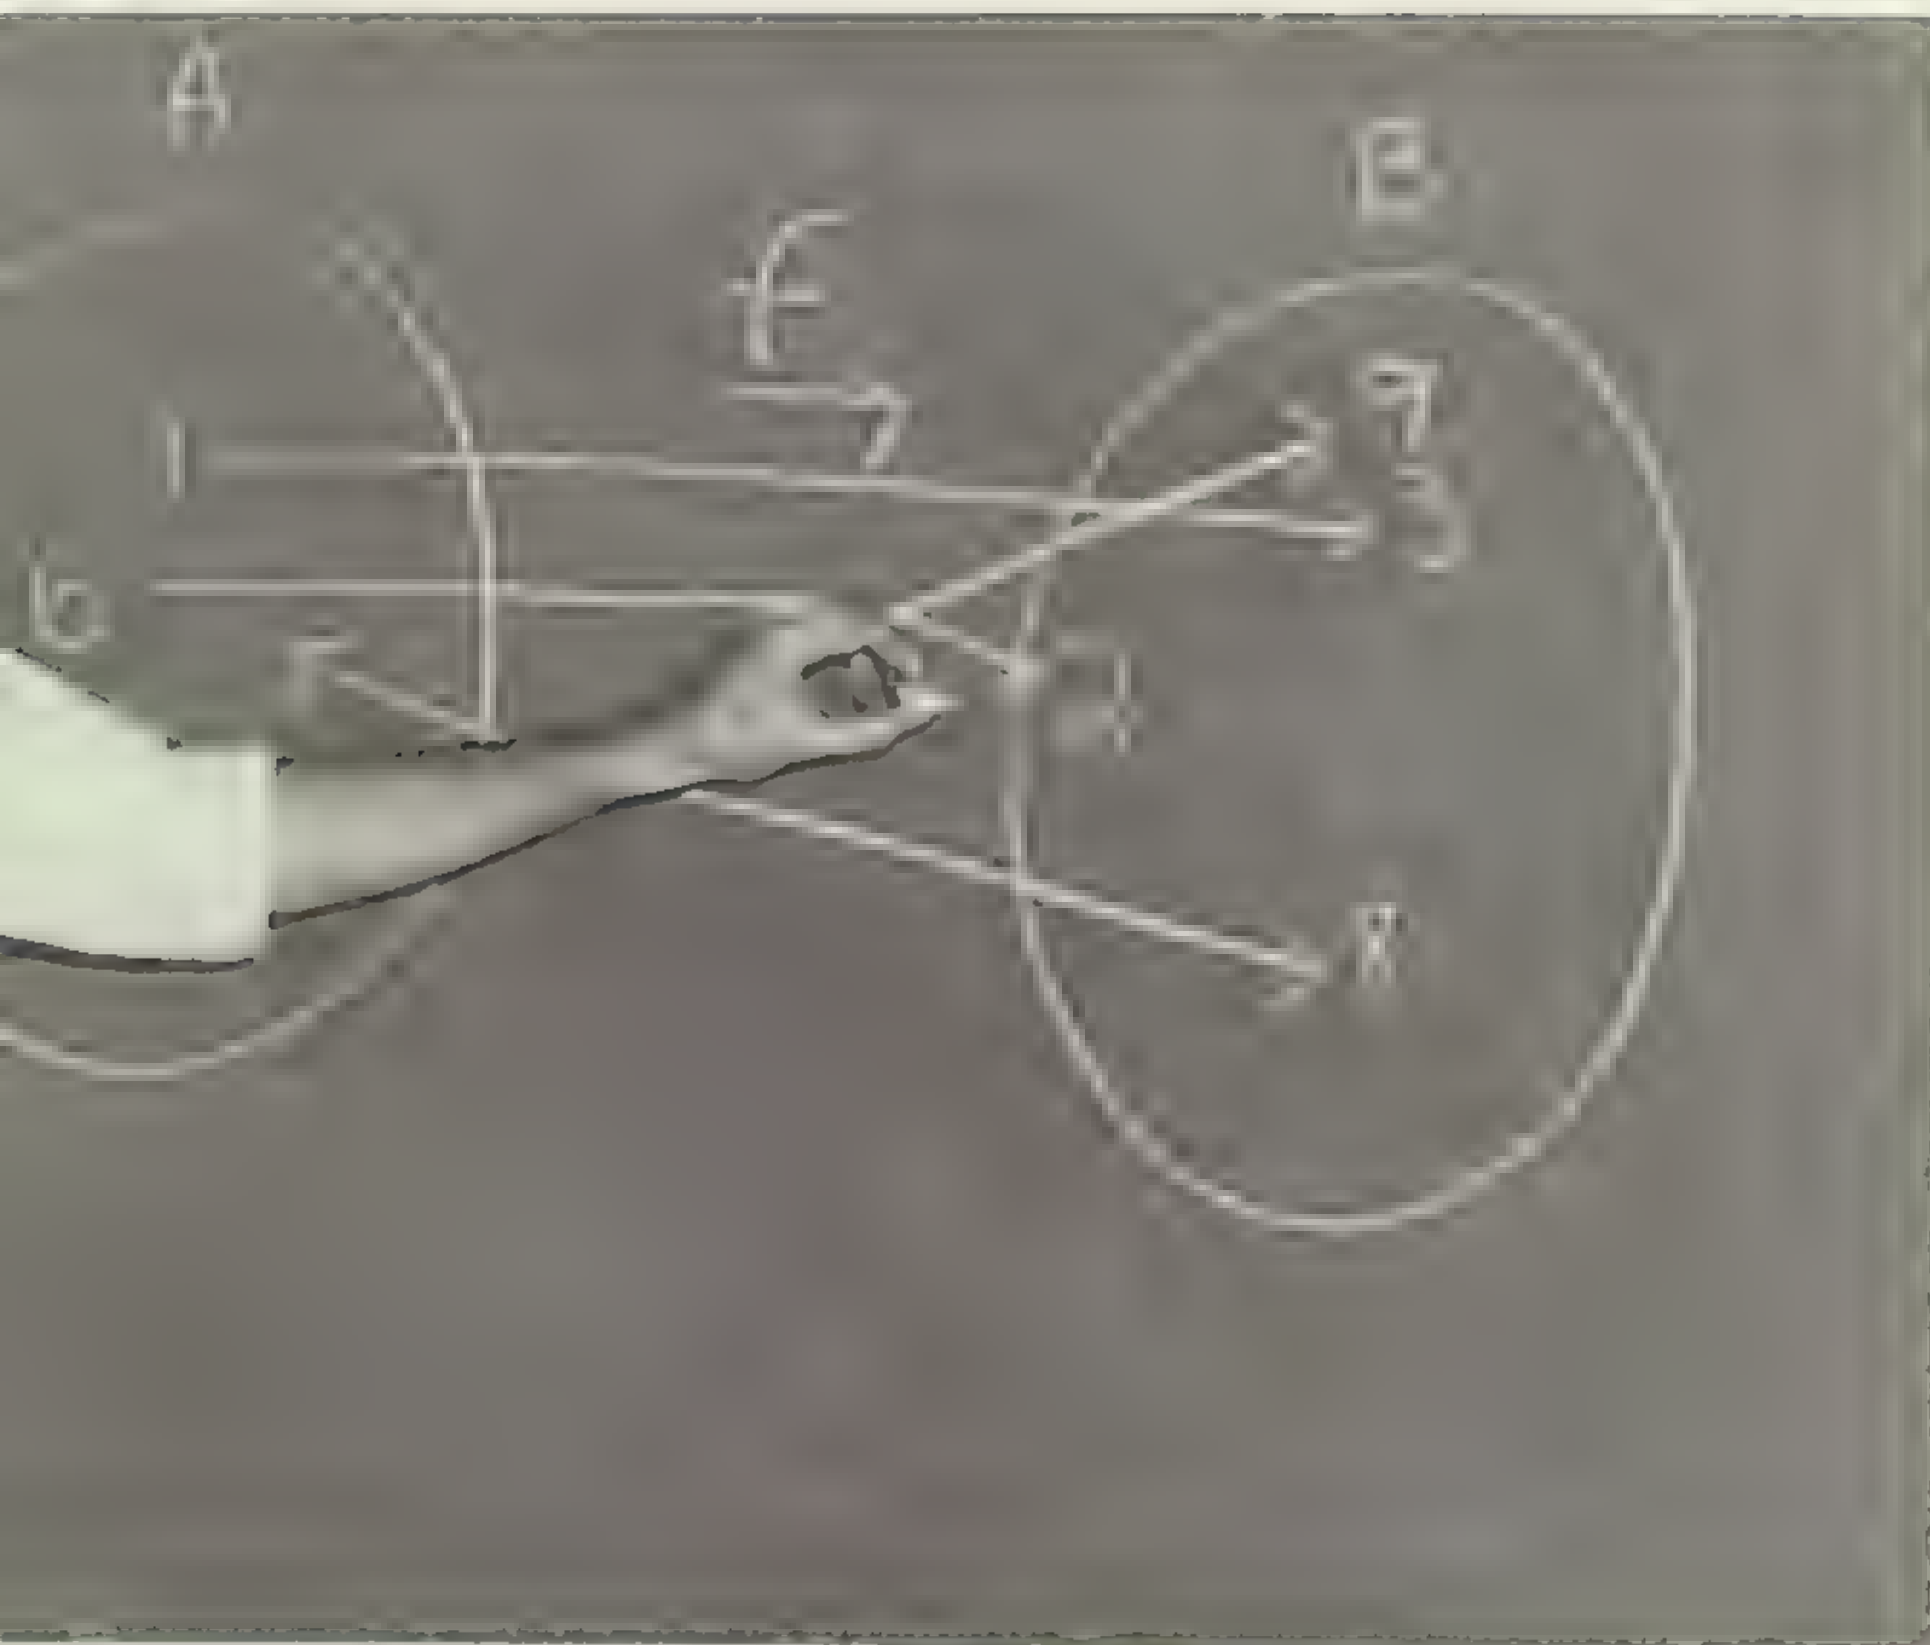

No truce has yet been called in the war between the modern and traditional approaches, but the "traditionalists" are slowly surrendering.

MATH DEPARTMENT. FRONT ROW: Mrs. Jo Ann Hoover, Mrs. Patricia Major, Miss Allison Fischer, Mrs. Lorraine Van Dette. SECOND ROW: Mr. Russell Peterson, Mr. Orville Byers, Mr. Richard Backensto, Mr. Richard Alverson (Department Chairman). ABSENT: Miss Beverly Salancy, Mr. John Davis

By using a model, Mr. Richard Alverson, Department Chairman, reinforces the abstract theory behind finding the locus of a point

To answer another student's question, Don Schumacher diagrams the mapping of a function

Testing her understanding of a newly-learned mathematical concept, Karen Engstrom demonstrates the procedure of graphing for her classmates

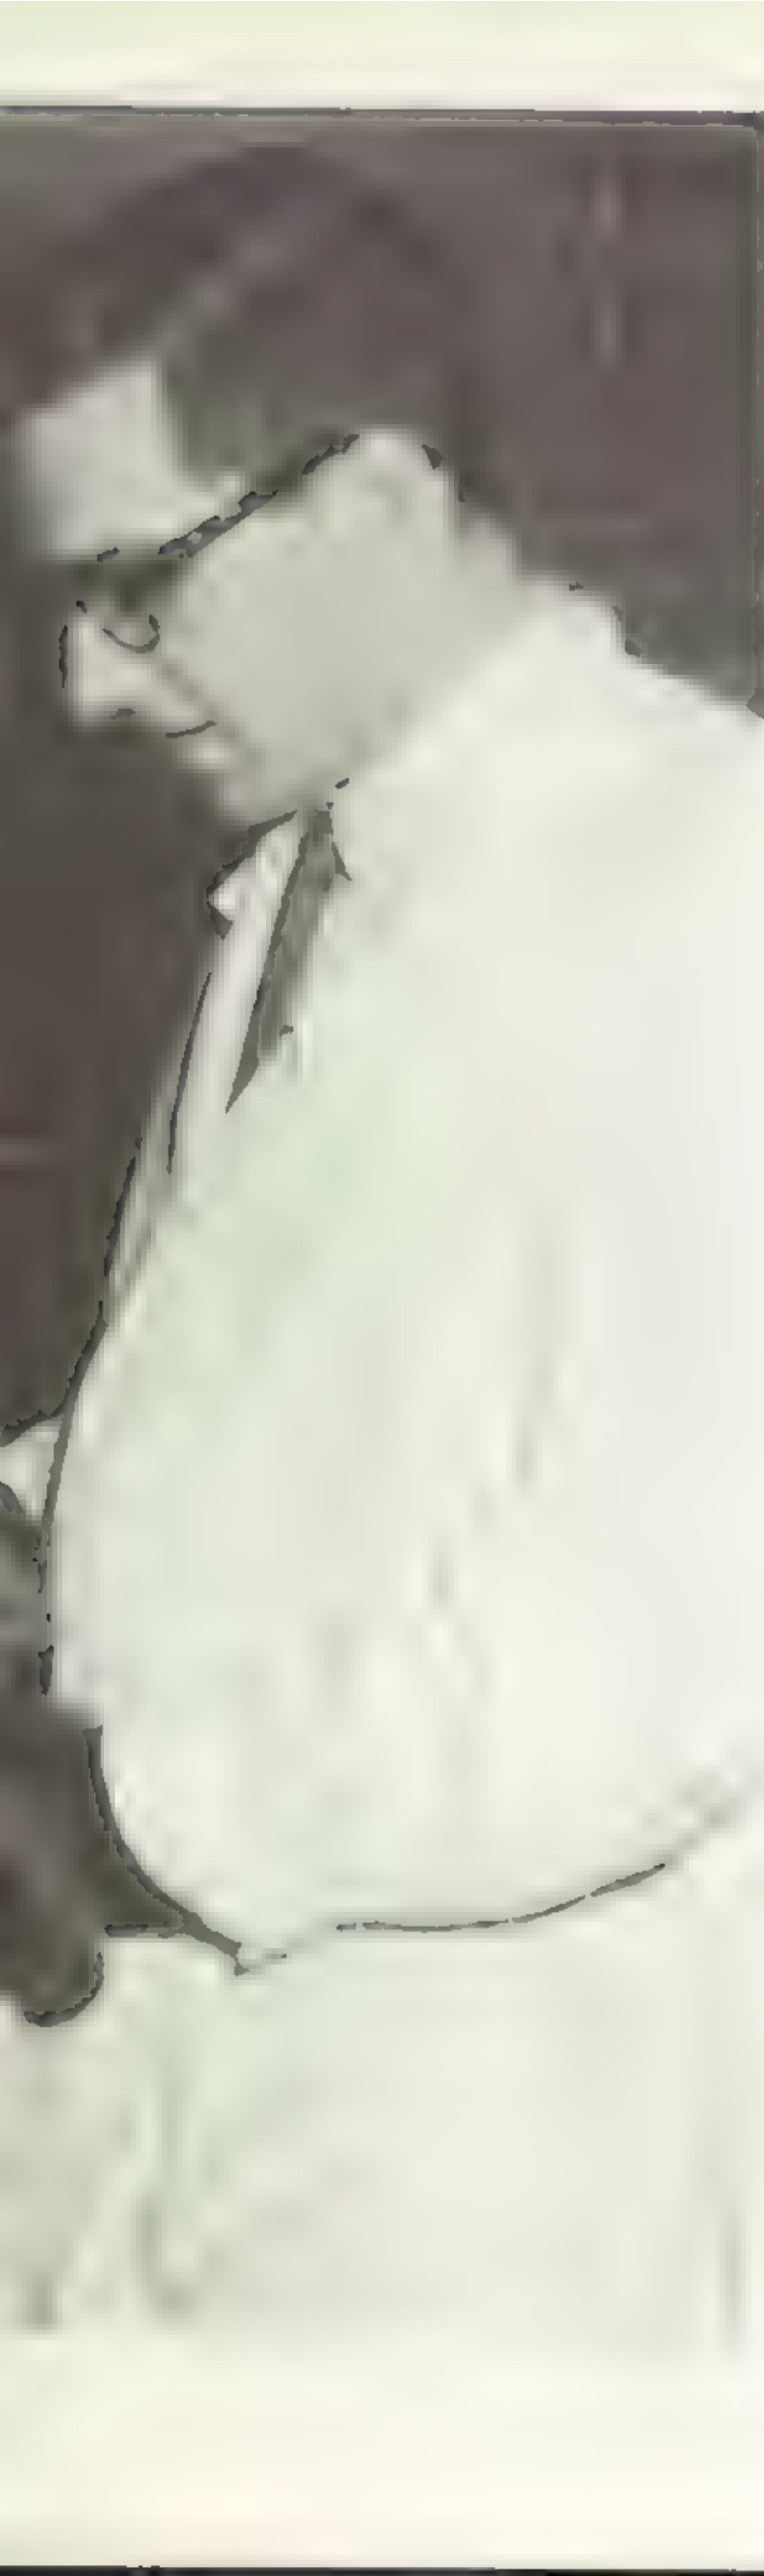

For one hour a day, junior Jim Pollock's mind is occupied with thoughts of scientific phenomena—electric current, ions, solutions. Experiments designed to supplement the text provide him with an opportunity to apply the concepts he has learned. Using his understanding of molarity he prepares a lead nitrate solution.

Girls are often criticized for being excessively emotional in biology classes. Although Martha Nelson feels little more than remote pity or revulsion for the animals she dissects in lab, she can't help finding the monkeys to which Mr. Herman Boatin introduces her, "admirable."

SCIENCE DEPARTMENT. FRONT ROW: Mr. Alan Drake, Mr. Stanley Smith, Mr. Jack Bridges (Cross Country Coach, Junior Varsity Basketball Coach, and Assistant Track Coach), Mr. Joseph Maguire. SECOND ROW: Mr. Eugene Wozniak, Mr. Mark Boersma (Department Chairman), Mr. Joseph Motillo, Mr. Herman Boatin. THIRD ROW: Mr. Richard Hough, Mr. Ralph Cornell (Assistant Varsity Football Coach and Varsity Tennis Coach), Mr. Lee Bartlett (Photography Adviser). ABSENT Miss Allison Fucher.

Science

BSCS elective course offered

Hypothesis: Seniors with a high level of interest in science will profit from an opportunity to explore in depth various biological problems.

Procedure: The science department has offered a new course, BSCS Laboratory Elective, in which students look for new problems, formulate hypotheses to explain certain aspects of the problems, and perform experiments to test their tentative solutions. Suggested plans for laboratory investigation, called "blocks," each of which lasts six weeks, are the units around which the course is built. Plant Growth and Development and Life in the Soil are among the blocks studied. Because no standard text is used, the student is truly exploring an "unknown," investigating it in the manner a research scientist working at the same level might employ.

Conclusion: Interested seniors have profited from the BSCS elective which permits them to employ scientific methods of investigation.

Working to perfect their lab technique, Rich Osborn and Mike Shea find that cooperation is often necessary in making accurate weighings of chemical substances used in an experiment.

Teaching 'aides' help with French, German

'Experts' teach about customs

Language labs which enable teachers to tune in on students struggling with a tongue-twisting phrase, educational filmstrips, and stories guaranteed to introduce 107 new words and 43 common idioms — all have been found good, but not ideal approaches to the problem of teaching a foreign language.

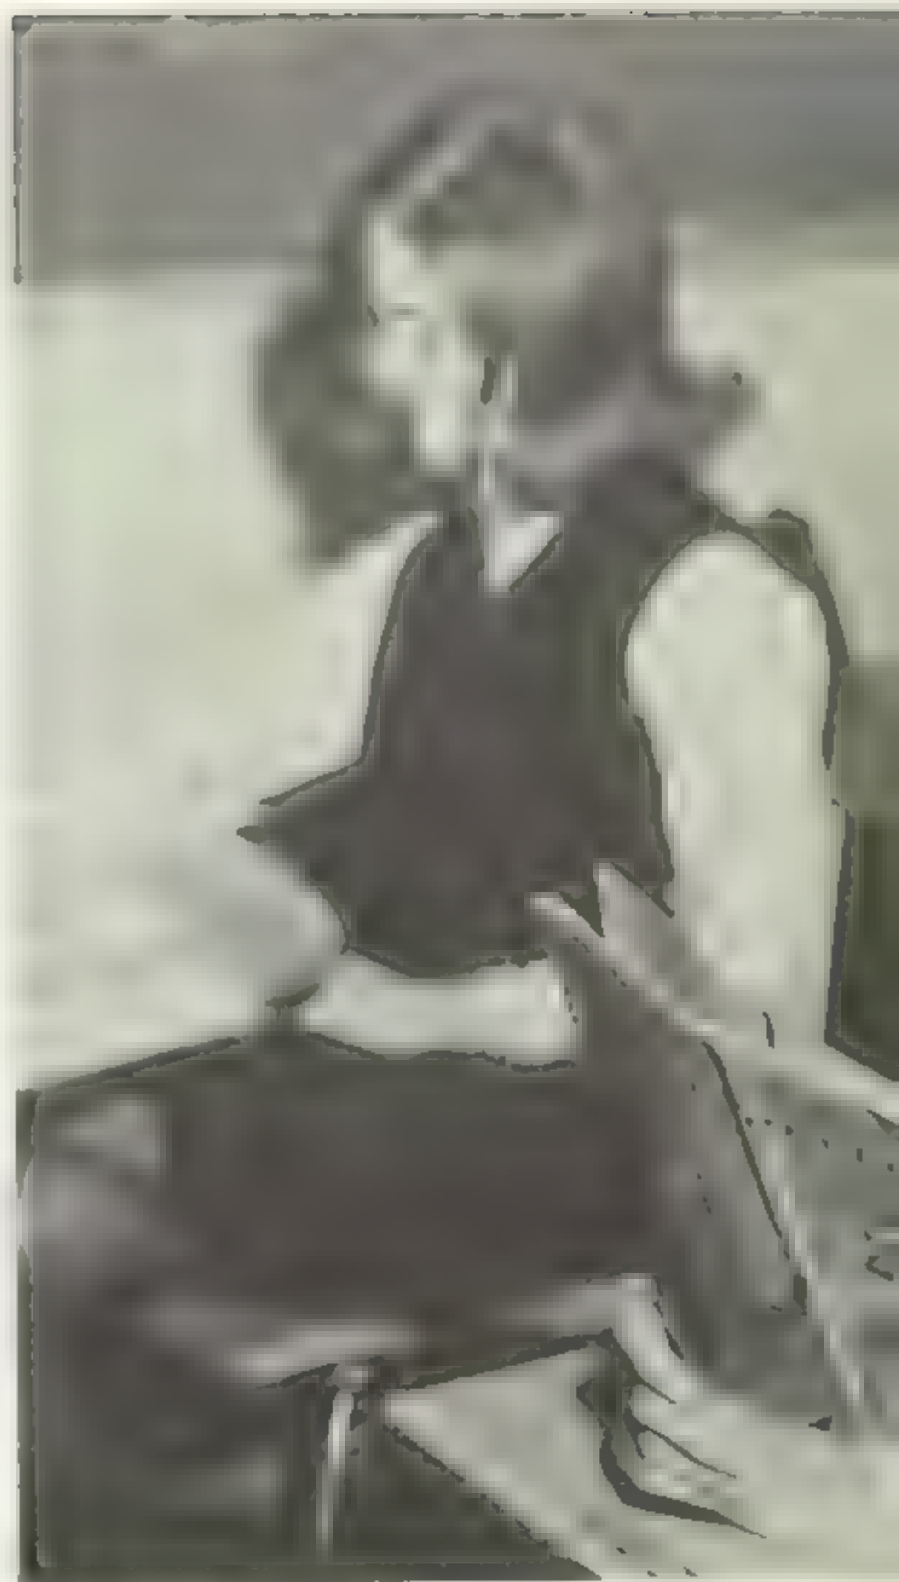

However, through an international trade, the Language Department has acquired an almost-perfect teaching aid: Edsel Ford's two foreign exchange students. In return for an opportunity to relax by speaking their native languages, Didier Prues of France and Norbert Wustrack of Germany aid in teaching the four language skills: comprehension, speaking, reading, and writing.

Edsel Ford has also gained a "commuting" German teacher, Mrs. Rita Golts, through an interschool trade with Dearborn High. Another new teacher, Miss Elaine Rawsky, teaches three English classes in addition to two Spanish classes.

Language teachers have only one objection to their nearly-perfect teaching aides — they must be returned after one year!

Reviewing a paragraph in the French magazine Match which he finds especially difficult to understand, Ric VanderHaagen wonders which he should consult first: the dictionary or classmates Sandy Munis and Darcy Green.

Senior Debbie Sutt doesn't have to consult her French book about rules in grammar. She saves time by turning to an expert, exchange student Didier Prues.

Studying the customs and traditions of foreign countries is obviously more enjoyable than studying the grammatical rules of its language—at least to Spanish student Margaret Keating

Exchange student Norbert Wustruck, grateful to cultural diffusion for bringing the German advent calendar to America, combats homesickness by purchasing the traditional calendar from German Club member Alvin Jenks

*Armed with concentration and safety glasses
Lynda Harnwick sees her first piece of wood

Can an artist's creation ever completely satisfy him? Karel Cus-fetelli asks Gary Duszkiewicz and Mr. Ralph Hasboun whether she should sand an edge which does not yet satisfy her

Art

Individualism stressed in student projects

Art is a form of expression that is paradoxical, for it is both universal and individualistic.

Edsel Ford's elective art courses emphasize the individualistic aspect. The student is urged to express himself through his creation and to become personally involved in it. When he finishes, the student can recognize a part of himself in his work of art. Even though twenty students draw the same subject, each interpretation is different and unique.

Varying impressions require varying means of expression. Pieces of cardboard serve as paintbrushes for students in Art 1. Jagged-edged pieces of smoke-colored glass mounted in concrete compose Rick Kowalczyk's "Ultra-Gothic," a sculpture which is displayed in the General Office. Students in Art 3 create designs by rearranging the letters in names.

Whether with the flick of a pencil or the stroke of a brush, each student learns something of himself as he creates.

Inspirations can be upsetting. Hesitating to modify the basic designs of their wood sculptures, Mike Lewis and Mark Newman seek Mr. Ralph Hasboun's measuring approval of their new ideas "Expert" advice and much constructive criticism are two advantages of group work. Charles Mustis, Paul Bailey, Pat Connery, and Edward Mierzwia assist each other

Contemporary

The faces of Edsel Ford choir members Linda Tyrell, Michele Giroux, Norma Osborn, Cheryl Vartanian, Laurel Dittmer, Gail Eastman, and Sharon Metropoulos display a melody of varied and changing emotions

A last-minute rehearsal is cut short as foreign exchange student Norbert Wustrack makes a back-stage tour. Neil Woodward breaks off in the middle of a stanza as Molly Baerhan, Norbert's guide, makes introductions

Music is an art often characterized by physical gestures—the cellist may adopt a distinctive method of bowing, the pianist may develop flourishes in his fingering technique. Mrs. Ruth Skelton spontaneously reaches out to draw the correct note from members of the vocal ensemble

Music Humanities course introduced

The voice, man's first musical instrument, has always been used to express emotion; it has wheedled, cajoled, admonished, rejoiced, and praised.

To increase understanding of this universal means of communication, the music department is offering one new class and sponsoring two new clubs.

Contemporary Music Humanities, open to all students who have completed 11B Music Humanities, will provide students with the opportunity to improve their listening skills and to become acquainted with all types of twentieth century music. The Folk Singing and Modern Music Masters clubs will further their members' understanding of vocal music. Tri-M, Folk Singing Club, and Contemporary Music Humanities are all steps in understanding a complicated means of communication as simple as man's basic emotions.

A contrast in dynamics is created when trio members Ric VanderHaagen, Marcia Stewart, and Paul Guichard are accompanied by the entire choir

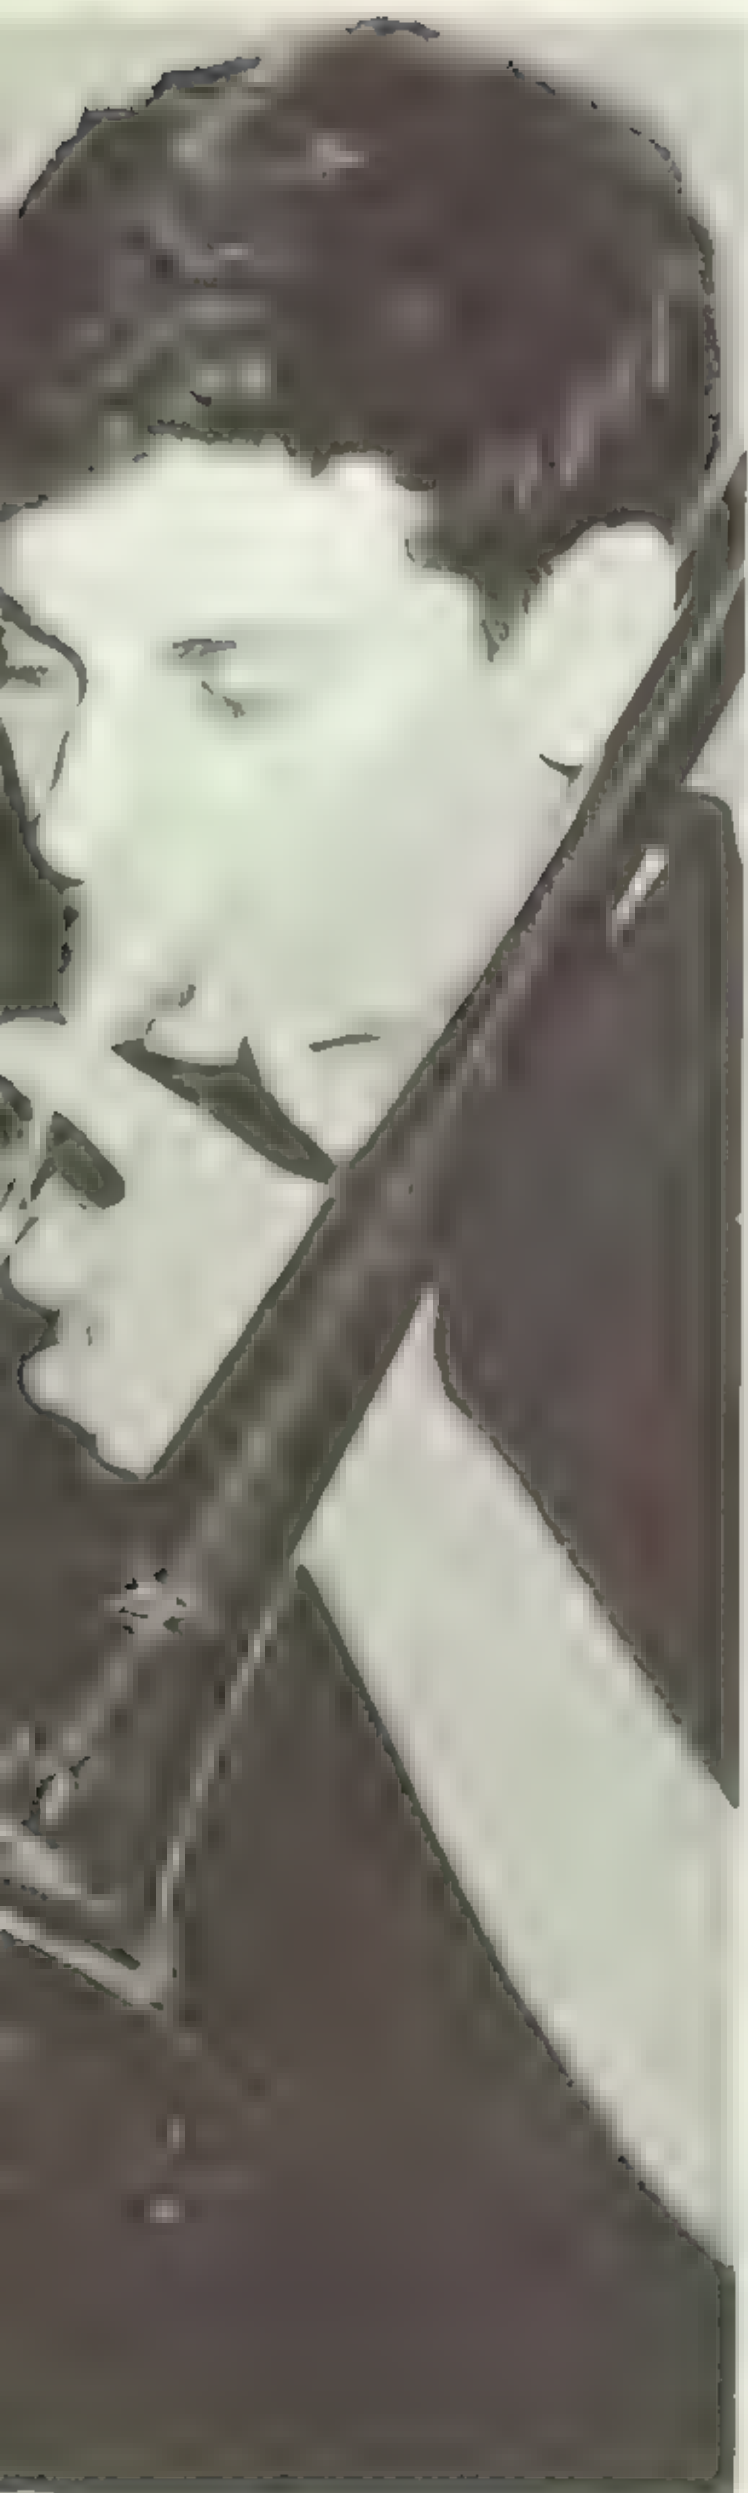

The American game of basketball is given a Spanish flavor as Mike Krupinski, vice-president of the band, and Dick Reed play "Spanish Flea" while the players warm up.

Clarinetists Nancy Schauer and Elaine Pittenger concentrate on perfection as they rehearse a composition for the winter concert for the umpteenth time.

Trumpetist Dean Musourdis improves his style by practicing "technical points he finds difficult to master."

Instrumental Music

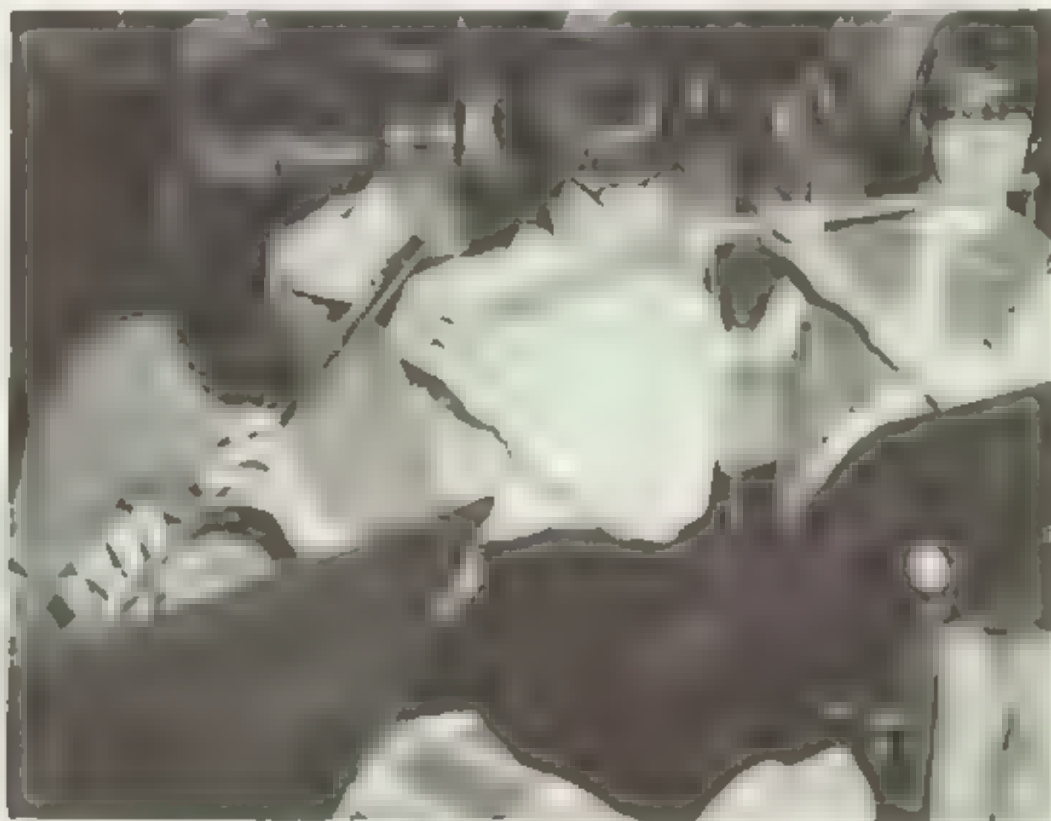

10B assembly clarifies concept of tone color

Most pieces of music played by the symphony orchestra are tangled skeins of sounds produced by the members of the four instrumental families. Identifying the threads or themes of a composition and the instruments creating them poses a knotty problem for many sophomores unfamiliar with the musical element of tone color.

In a special music assembly for the sophomores, the band unravelled the complex pattern of sounds woven when the members of the various instrumental families play together in a symphony orchestra. The band also examined methods of playing each instrument and the special effects used to create mood.

When the basic sounds had been introduced, compositions featuring each of the instrumental groups were played. The brass section was represented by Handel's "Water Music," the woodwind section by Tchaikowsky's "Dance of the Toy Flutes."

When they left the auditorium, the 10B's were mentally "picking up stitches" and becoming familiar with their new musical knowledge.

Flutists Diane Muka, Mary Lynn Dmochowski, and Nancy Vance realize that practice does not end with before-and-after school rehearsals. They are finding themselves humming excerpts of compositions in a parking lot and during passages in class.

UN Courier, atlas broaden news coverage

The typical library could be billed as a book worm's paradise. Not Edsel's. EF bookworms are forced through a maze of indecision, in which every passage leads to tantalizing choices.

The average bookworm is perhaps fascinated first by magazines from such foreign countries as France, Spain, and Germany. The latest copy of the UNESCO Courier, published by the United Nations, may be the next choice with which he is confronted. When he has finally decided in favor of the UNESCO Courier, his attention may be distracted by the newspaper atlas, which is a conglomeration of articles published in various foreign papers.

The solution to the indecisive bookworm's problem? Read all three articles, of course!

Removal of the conference rooms has provided Edsel Ford's librarian with much-needed extra space. Ray Slumpff browses along a row of bookshelves which are the reconverted walls of the conference rooms.

A study of reference materials is made by Mrs. Cook and Miss Lee, who are in charge of the library. They are looking over the new books and materials that have been added to the collection.

Sharon Gorb perfects her touch at the new IBM machines, included as a part of the office machines instruction for the first time this year

Business Education

Increased interest expands curriculum

Expansion is the key word in the Business Education Department this year.

Expansion is evident in rooms B101, B103, and B104 which are garnished with newly-installed machinery. Room B101 has been equipped with IBM key punch machines. Room B103 has been installed with a distributive education and display laboratory in response to increased enrollment in retailing, salesmanship, and marketing classes. Room B104 boasts a steno laboratory installation. The console and headrests permit several different tapes to be played at varying speeds so that each student may progress at his own rate and achievement level.

The curriculum has also been expanded. Typing II courses now include instruction in data processing. Record-keeping is being taught for the first time. The department also has two coordinates in business: one concerned with office occupations, the other with selling jobs.

Expansion—of facilities, instruction, and opportunity—is indeed the department theme.

Homemaking courses grow in popularity

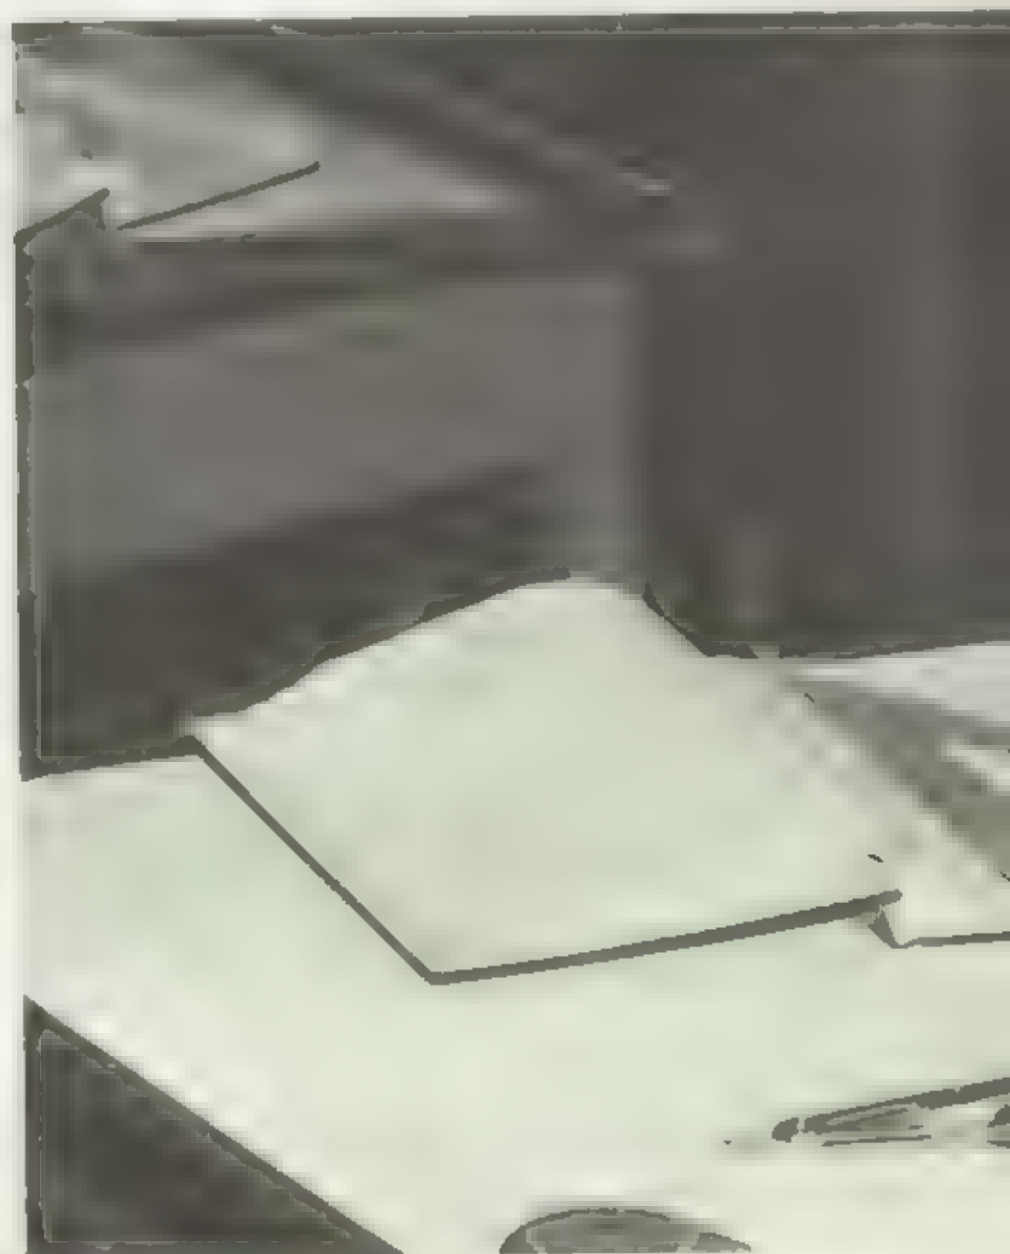

Industrial Arts Department offers courses in hydraulics

If your car won't start and there's not a gas station in sight and you don't belong to AAA, what do you do? If you must have a cake for dinner because your husband's boss is coming and it's Sunday and you can't find any stores that are open, what do you do? Students in the Vocational Arts Department know the answers and are prepared to act in such emergencies, for this department teaches practical skills, useful both in the present and in the future. More students are now realizing their need for these skills and are enrolling in the industrial arts and homemaking courses. After taking these courses, it is hoped that the auto shop students will be able to look under the hood and actually know what the greasy gadgets are, or that Homemaking students will learn that Fred Sanders and Sara Lee are not the only one who can make a cake!

Courses emphasize goal of total fitness

*Bieniek joins department,

"Tomorrow is for the physically fit."

Survival of the fittest? That's not exactly what the President's Council on Physical Fitness had in mind when it composed this slogan.

The EF Physical Education Department's "total fitness" goal reflects the slogan's emphasis on the future. Students are encouraged to develop an interest in sports as a form of recreation for the present and the future.

Mrs. April Bieniek, new to the department this year, is enthusiastic about EF's approach to physical education. Her position as cheerleading adviser provides her with an outlet for her enthusiasm and hard work.

Students, too, are working hard as a result of the Board of Education's decision to award one fourth unit of credit for each semester of gym. Survival of the fittest? No, just greater incentive for achieving "total fitness."

Patently, Miss Carole Gates, Miss Constance Charles, Mrs. April Bieniek, and Miss Irma Calvosi sort field hockey sticks which their tired and sweaty students "forgot" to rearrange in order of height

While their students are busy positioning themselves on the touch football field and warming up for a half hour of scrimmaging, Mr. Arnold Domke, Mr John Davis, and Mr Pat Wyke take a quick look over their class records

Touch football is a traditional part of the fall sport. Glen Kough and Marty Beakala co demonstrate the skill of blocking as Glen tries to prevent Marty from reaching the quarterback before the ball is released

Use of an unlimited dribble in girl's basketball this year promises to make the game livelier still. However, the ball seems almost motionless when each girl wants to grab it.

Activities present responsibilities

Activities teach individual tolerance, acknowledgement of the right to self-expression, discipline, and realization that responsibility is involved in its exercise.

Plaque honors servicemen killed in war in Vietnam

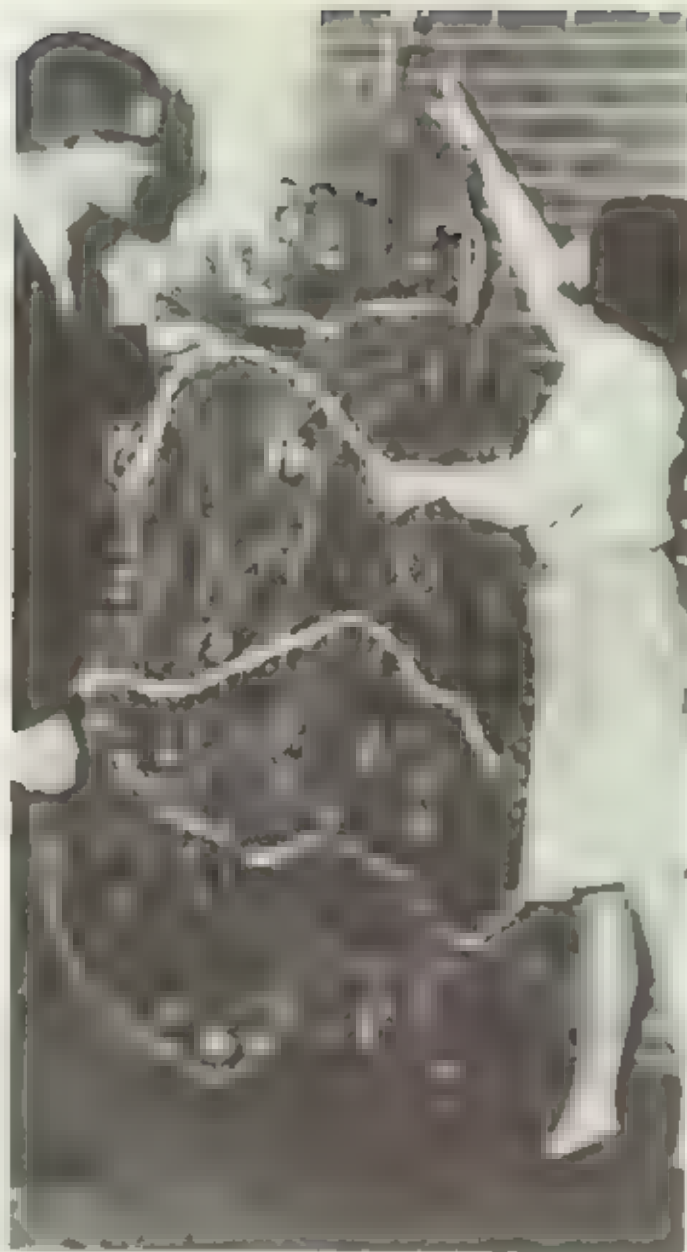

Hootenanny raises money for Bill Valentine Fund

Seniors on EF's Executive Council were only ten years old when they heard President Kennedy say, "Ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country." But seven years later the members of EF's student government have not forgotten the words. Instead of devoting their efforts to getting apple machines or lounges, this year the government concerned itself with purchasing a plaque on which will be inscribed the names of EF students killed in the Vietnamese war and raising money for Mr. Bill Valentine, a DHS teacher who needs thousands of dollars for a kidney machine. The Edsel Ford Executive Council knew what it could do for its school and did it.

At Christmas the seniors takes pride in decorating their lounge. Executive Council members Cathie Johnson and George Barbu place a wreath on the wall

Edsel Ford did it again. Executive Council adviser Mr. Robert Dalton and members Blair Kool and Karen Kitzmann accept the first place award in the clean-up contest from Councilmen George Bonlie, John Baza, and Thomas Dolan

Among the Executive Council's projects this year was the sponsoring of a Hootenanny for the Bill Valentine fund. Officers Karen Kitzmann, George Barbu, Cathie Johnson, and Bob Keteyian meet to discuss final details

Russians creates new EF organization

Foreign language students hold contests at parties, Olympiad

The Russians are coming! The Russians are coming! Is Edsel Ford being invaded by the Reds? Not quite, but with the addition of Russian to the foreign language curriculum, a new organization, the Russian Club, has been formed. Its aims are not to overthrow the US, but rather to promote an interest in the Russian language and culture. This club joined the four other foreign language clubs this year in their annual activities. At the Christmas party the members gathered to celebrate the holiday with foreign customs. All the clubs met again at the Mardi Gras which was put on by the French Club. The students disguised themselves in costumes and competed for prizes. The clubs competed again at the Olympiad in the spring. The annual competition is always friendly, and there has not yet been a need for the United Nations to intervene in the "cold war" among the foreign language clubs at Edsel Ford.

Looking with amazement at all the food on her plate, Cindy Toth wonders if she can finish it all. The French Club dinner included such delicacies as rabbit, tempting her to eat more and not just French poetry.

After showing an amusing film of a 1939 Dearborn High Roman Banquet to the Latin Club members, Barbara Brotherton assists adviser James Ankenbrandt in re-winding the film. The Roman costumes and outdated hair styles were hilarious to the 1968 members.

T-Bird orators capture third place in first try

Resolved: That Congress should adopt uniform regulations concerning criminal investigations. That was the topic that sent members of the debate team to books, magazines, and pamphlets, trying to find material to support their positions. However, accumulating information for their note card files was only the beginning for the twenty members of Edsel Ford's first debate team. The next step was for the debaters to improve their argumentative forms in debate class.

To enroll in this class students were required to have a B average in English or to have taken two semesters of public speaking, maintaining a B average in that class. Members of the varsity and junior varsity squads were chosen from the debate class and from interested students who attended organizational meetings. Every two weeks the debate team met with other Sauk Trail League teams to present their arguments. The debates were divided into "rounds," periods in which two varsity affirmative and two varsity negative debaters from each school spoke. Each of the debaters worked for a good rating in speaker points which would increase his team's score. Benefiting from their debate training, the varsity and junior varsity combined to take third place in the Sauk Trail League.

Much after school preparation is necessary to make a good debate. Mr. Gordon Cochran meets often with his debaters to keep them in good shape. Scott Miller, Karen Kitzmann, and Mary Ellis listen to their taped speeches for any errors that they might have made in their rebuttle.

effects for school plays

If the effectiveness of lighting and sound effects at a murder mystery can be judged by the number of screams from the audience, then Audio Visual Club members included in the stage crew can be rated "competent plus." AV stage crew members helped to create the tense atmosphere essential to the murder mysteries "Ten Little Indians" and "Any Number Can Die."

Electronics Club members interested themselves in a similar topic: the production of the modern radio or television show. In February, they toured the newly-remodeled WXYZ studios, observing color equipment, cameras, monitors, and the preparation of a newscast.

Without the experience and assistance of AV and Electronics clubs members, Edsel Ford's "shows" wouldn't go on.

Club helps teach retarded children

Making scrapbooks, singing Christmas carols, is that what teachers and nurses do? It may not be, but it is what Future Teachers and Future Nurses do.

Under the supervision of a new adviser, Mrs. Almerene Kaufman, the Future Teachers made scrapbooks for a class of mentally retarded children. After completing the project, members took the scrapbooks to the children and assisted the teacher in teaching the class, using the books they had made.

The Future Nurses, in addition to their volunteer work at Oakwood Hospital, caroled at Veterans' Hospital at Christmas. This provided members with a new type of contact with the hospital and created a somewhat different association with the patients.

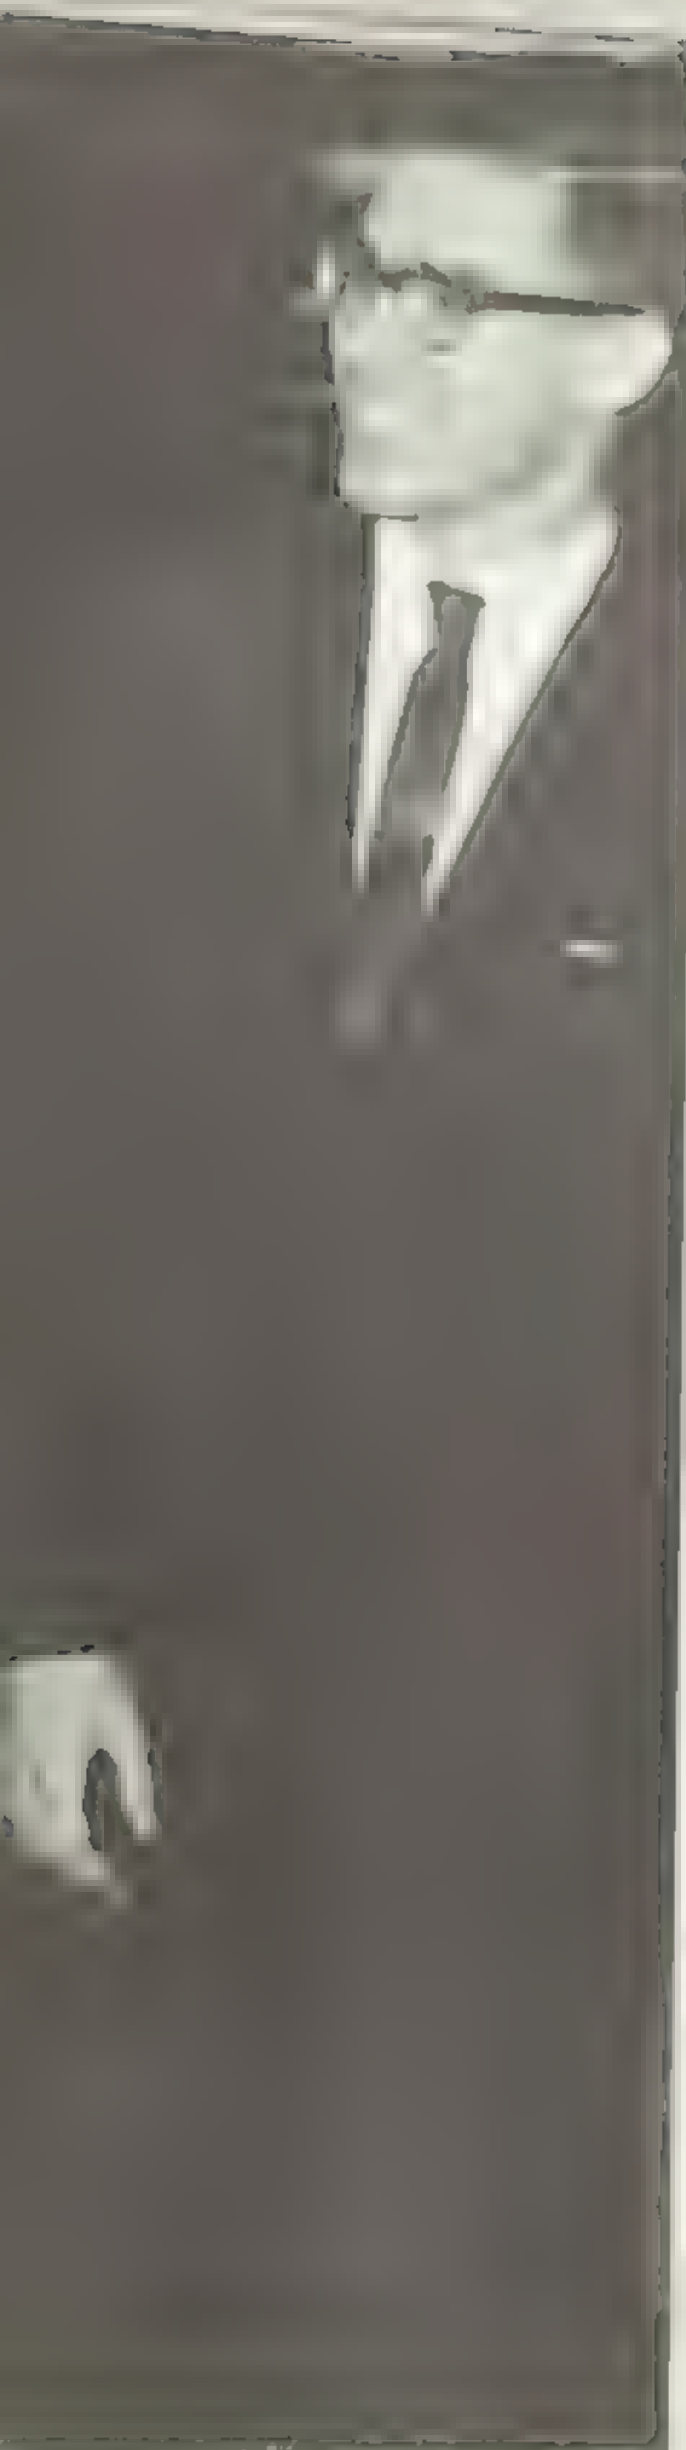

In these activities both the Future Nurses and the Future Teachers learned something of their prospective careers, for helping others is the key to success in both jobs, whether it's giving shots or singing Christmas carols.

Although the word Hi-Y often brings to mind an image of boys in suits, the members of this club and their adviser, Mr. Richard Alverson, do not confine their activities to attending chapel services on the Wednesdays before Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Easter.

Instead, Hi-Y members sponsor many diversified activities including an annual Christmas dance, a hilarious basketball game between the Hi-Y and the faculty, complete with cheerleaders, and a car wash which helps to increase the club's funds. Dave Hardesty, president of the Michigan Hi-Y Council, and eleven other members of the Edsel Ford chapter of the Hi-Y attended the annual Youth Legislature in the capitol at Lansing this year where they participated in a simulated session of the Legislature. Sandwiched in among these special events were the bi-monthly meetings of the upper house, with Stuart Baker as president, and the lower house, led by Blair Kooi, at which members planned their many service projects.

Two branches reunite

Girls aid UNICEF, Salina orphans

Three white doves and the words "peace on earth" were painted on the Y-Teens' Christmas window this year. If this phrase expresses the club's ideal, then its corollary, "good will among men," represents the Y-Teens' more immediate goal.

To achieve this goal, the Y-Teens have reunified, disbanding the Alpha-Tri and Omega branches which resulted from "the big split" last year. Headed by President Chris Dunosky and Vice-President Susan Borsos and advised by Miss Allison Fischer and Mrs. Joanne McConkey, the girls used their bi-monthly meetings as planning sessions for their many service projects.

Among these service projects were a candy sale and the collection of money for UNICEF. In December, the Y-Teens planned a Christmas party for thirty orphans from the Salina district. The girls worked hard at making gay, stuffed animals and stockings brimming with gifts of candy and toys for the children.

Through service projects such as the Christmas party, the Y-Teens hope to promote "good will among men."

Thespians stage play, Any Number Can Die

'Behind scenes' work pays off at performances of mysteries

Suspense, murder, and mystery are words which best describe the two plays presented at Edsel Ford this year. Screams came from the audience as the shots rang out on stage at the performances of Ten Little Indians and the Thespians' production, Any Number Can Die. However, neither of the plays would have gotten the response they did had it not been for the efforts of those behind the scenes, the members of the Drama Club. Each light had to go on at the right time, each telephone had to ring at the right time, and each prop had to be in its place so that all would go well at the performances. However, these Drama Club members do not get without reward. After proving themselves in many long, hard hours of work on school productions they are invited to join Thespian Troupe #1408. Each year the Thespians present their own play which is completely student produced and directed. Under the direction of Mark Sawyer, president of the Thespians, and assistant director Mallory Simpson the Troupe presented a comedy mystery by Fred Carmichael with more suspense, more murder, and more mystery.

Not only is initiation into the Thespians club funny and embarrassing, it can also be very strict. One of the requirements of the initiates was to wear a sign and have the present members sign it. Donna Kuter, the clerk, makes sure that Mary Prescott has enough signatures for acceptance.

Along with the poetry and art section, the staff also introduced a personalized column, "Awake and A Ware," by senior Janet Ware. Students also had other opportunities to contribute to the Bolt because of the staff's decision to continue the "Letters to the Editor" column, which was started a few years ago. Innovation as well as student contribution characterized Volume XIII of the Bolt.

Co-editors Wright, Schonhofen head '68 Flight staff for Volume XIII

Have you ever visited room A18, the new Flight room? The room has two totally different atmospheres during the day and after school. Throughout the day, A18 is an ordinary, quiet English classroom. After school — beware — mass commotion sets in.

As soon as classes are over, Co-editors Barb Wright and Martha Schonhofen enter the room and begin to sort pictures. Minutes later, typists, section editors, and staff members start pulling out layouts, index cards, and proofs. By the time 4 p.m. arrives, the Flight staff is busy working in assigned groups. In the midst of all this activity, Mrs. Elinor Patouhas, the new Flight adviser, assists in choosing pictures and correcting copy.

Striving to duplicate last year's award-winning efforts, the staff continues to cause commotion every night in A18.

An organized picture schedule is important to the planning of a yearbook. Editor Martha Schonhofen checks to see that all requested pictures are posted on the bulletin board.

Council adopts pin, girls work for 1000

Girls who accumulate demerits for wrinkled gym blouses and unlabelled tank suits find an opportunity to "redeem" themselves by earning positive points—and awards—in the GAA.

The GAA Council, feeling that a gap existed between the 600-point letter and the 1300-point pin, decided that another award should be adopted. Council members proceeded to "invent" the 1000-point award: a gold pin with a black enamel covering. It was hoped that the new award would provide girls with an incentive to participate in more activities and earn more points. Ten GAA members received the new pin at the January awards banquet.

Although the girls' free-throw averages and batting averages are not soaring, many have steadily-increasing point totals, making them eligible for the new award.

team to championship

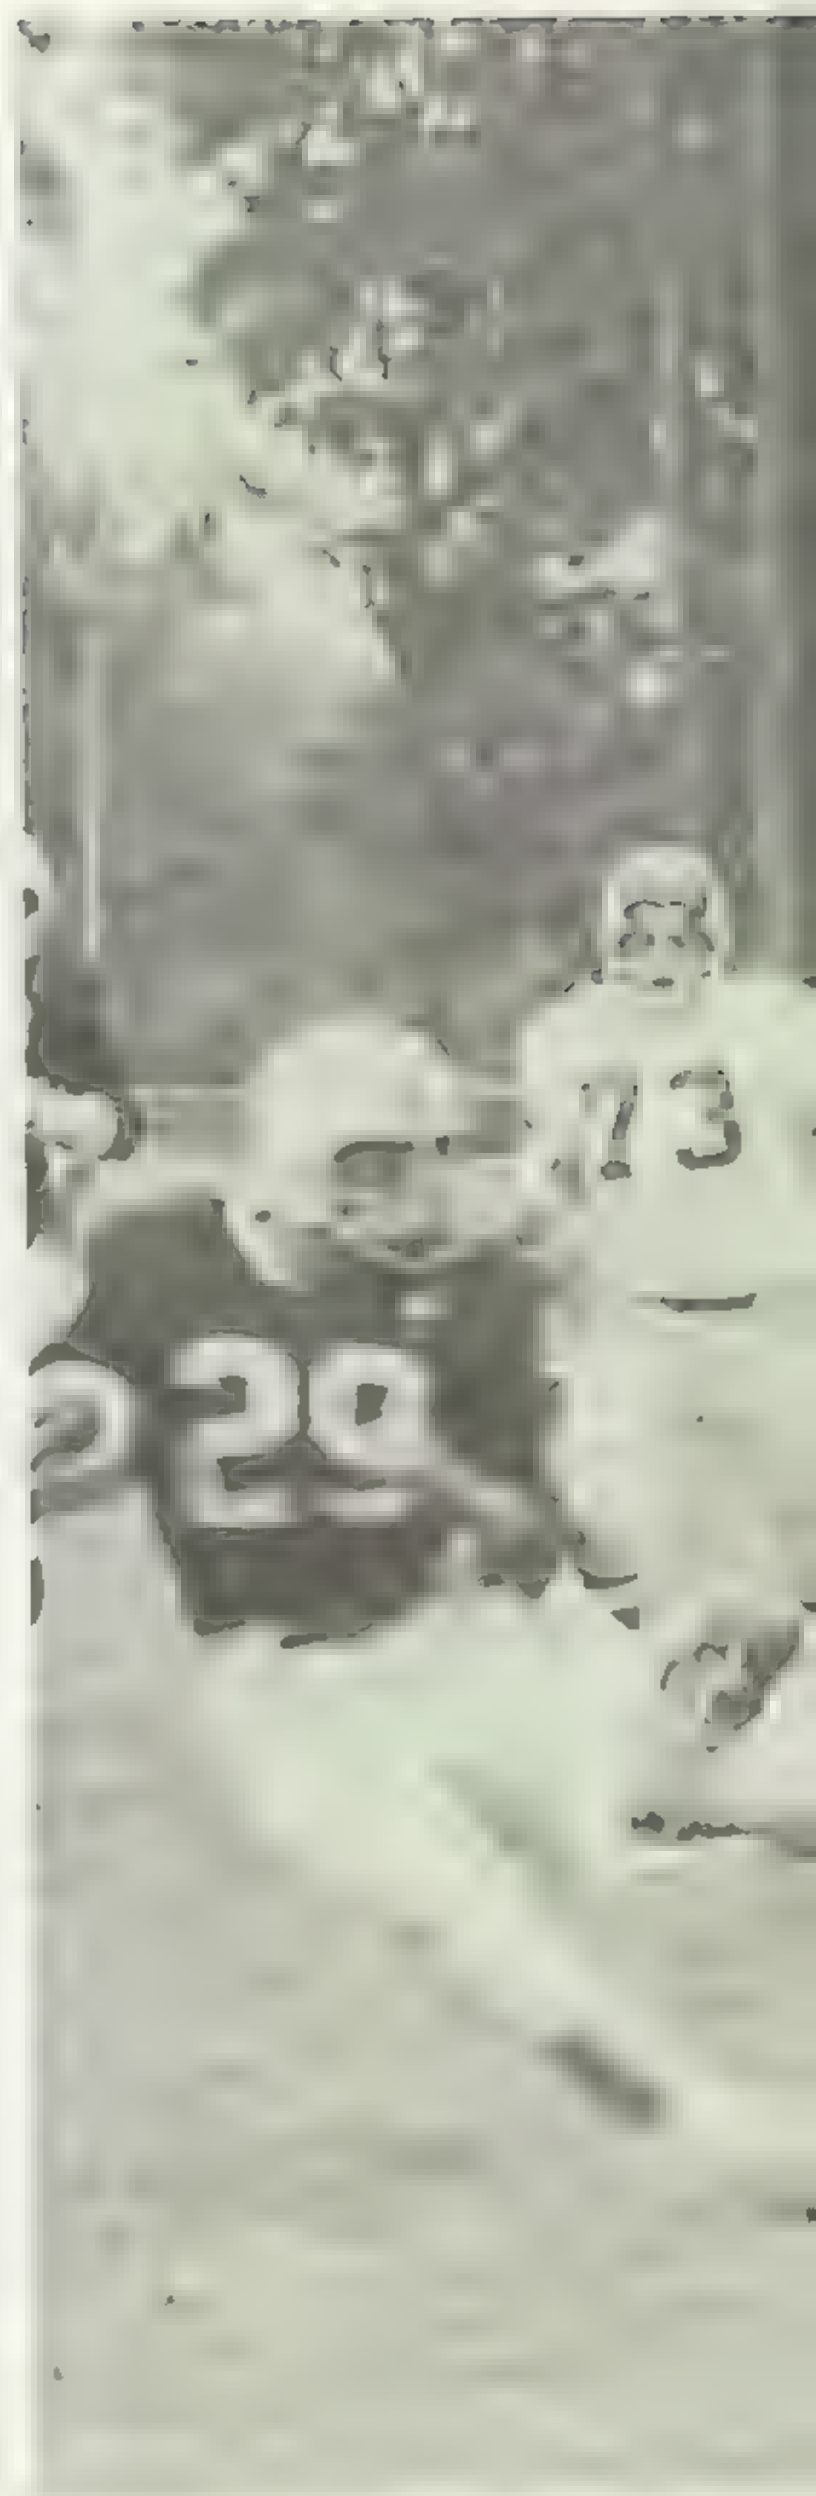

"We're number one! We're number one!" was the most frequent cry on the lips of the cheerleaders, the Varsity section, and the team. Undeclared championship for the title of the new Sauk Trail League was the reason for the cheer. The only game lost was not the fault of the team, but a unique combination of treacherous weather and a decent Allen Park team. But the team was number one nevertheless.

A good portion of the team's strength came from Coach Davis' "wonderboy," Ted Grignon. At the helm of a powerful team, Grignon, an All-City and All-State quarterback, did a fantastic job. He was the first player in the history of Edsel Ford, as well as the city of Dearborn, to be named to the first team of the All-State selection. With the assistance of Bob Keteyian, Paul Wojewuczki, and John Julian in the backfield and down the field, Grignon and the rest of the great team kept the ball moving. Grignon credits his team heavily for success. With this combination, is there any wonder how the team became number one?

Now Coach Davis is looking on toward next year. With most of the team leaving, and with seventeen returning lettermen, all he can do is hope for the same kind of luck that he had with the Thunderbirds in the 1967 season.

Fantastic catches and runbacks seemed to be the thing to do for Paul Wojewuczki this season. Driving for the ball, he makes another great catch.

The roll out proved to be an effective weapon in early season play. While quarterback Ted Grignon (29) rolls out past oncoming defenders, Ron Henry (67) and Tim Edwards (74) set up blocking.

Harriers finish in tie for third place

"Turn about is fair play," appeared to be the motto of this year's Cross Country squad. After last year's unsuccessful season, the new co-captains, Dave Lennox and Mike McCartan, had their work cut out for them.

Because of the delay in the start of school this year, many of the early practices were held under the eyes of the co-captains. Despite this loss of time, the co-captains built a strong team, relying on their speed and on the senior varsity, Gary Collins, Dave Baxter, and Dave Padys, to tie for third.

Although this was a big step forward, Coach Bridges is hopeful that next year the team will do better.

That last long minute before the starting gun sounds is a time of deep concentration for the runners, as they silently plan strategy

"Sprint! Sprint!" Easy to say, but extremely hard to do after running the rugged two-mile Cross Country course. But Mike McCartan did and passed his Wayne opponent.

League coaches pick Grignon, Aylward for All-League Team

"For every good there exists an evil."

This rang sadly true for Mr. Arnold Domke and the Edsel Ford cagers. Coach Domke had many good things going for him and the team, but not enough to pull Edsel out of a tie for second place with the Melvindale Cardinals.

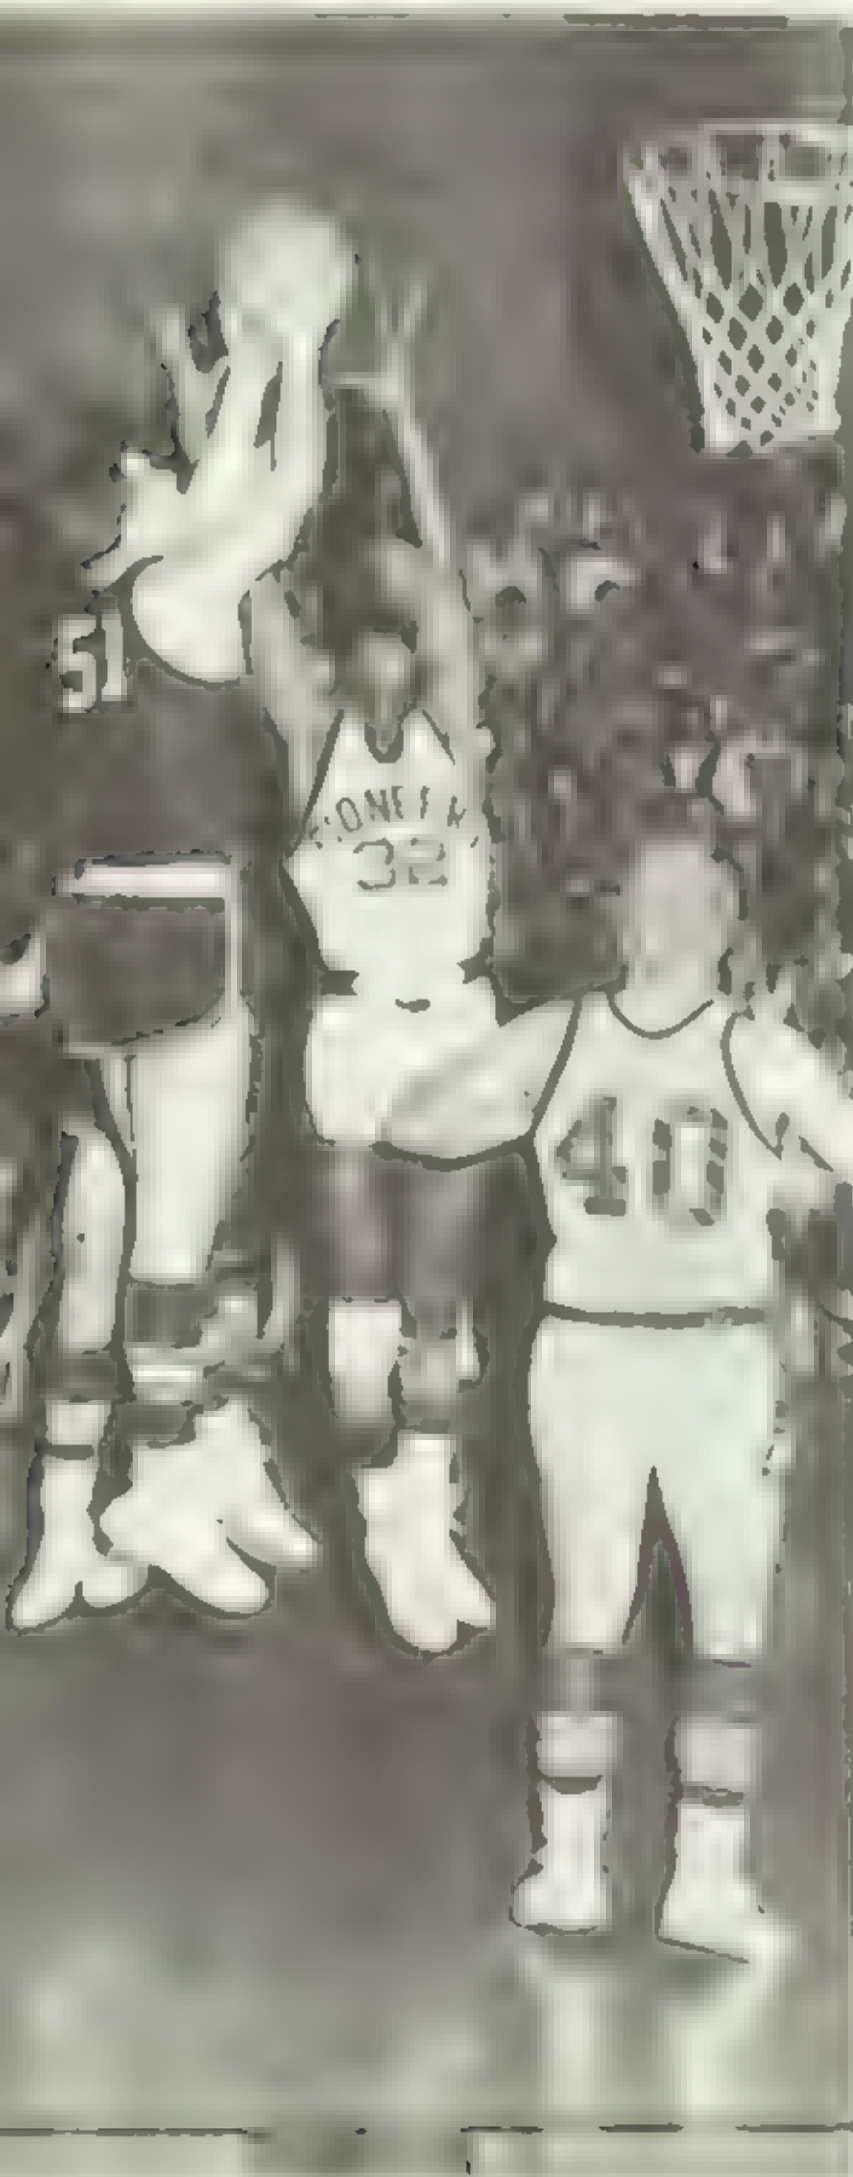

During the early part of the season the team seemed to be unable to do anything wrong. But then came the Dearborn game, giving Edsel a game loss and a morale loss. During the game, Bob Ketyian sustained a major injury, the first of many that plagued the Edsel Ford team. Both of the high jumping forwards, Dennis Aylward and Bob Boreas, were benched with leg injuries. To counter these "evils," Edsel had a couple of "good" things going. Coach Domke worked the team into a smooth playing squad, adding the services of two sophomores, Bill Meyer and Rick Jenks, toward the end of the season. Two other "good" things going for the T-Birds were All-League players Dennis Aylward and Ted Grignon. With these "good things" fighting the evil, Edsel managed a 10-5 record for the season.

tournament games

During the tense closing moments of the Van Arman League final game, Edsel captain, Jimmy Aylward (41) leaps high trying to tip the ball to a teammate as Bob Ketryan (31) waits anxiously.

Rising above high-jumping defenders, guard Ted Grignon (14) goes up for a shot in the final moments of the first half of the Melvindale game which ended in a victory for Edsel.

LEFT: Scoring in the first minutes in a close game with Melvindale, guard Bob Ketryan (31) drives in past his defender for a lay up and an easy two points. RIGHT: Forward Dennis Aylward (40) jumps above Melvindale defenders to take a shot as Bob Ketryan (31) and Richard Jenks (34) await a possible rebound.

Guarded closely by Wayne opponents, co-captain of the team, Glenn Kough (10), searches for a teammate to help him as James Berms and Mike Galay come to his aid. The game ended in a 71-57 victory for Edsel.

Wrestling

Diets, exercise pay off in 9-2 record for EF matmen

The most weight-conscious students at Edsel Ford are not calorie-counting girls, but pound-counting members of the wrestling team. Warm-up drills, climbing flights of stairs, and practice in the 102-degree heat of the wrestling room dubbed "the sweatbox" by team members help to condition the EF grapplers.

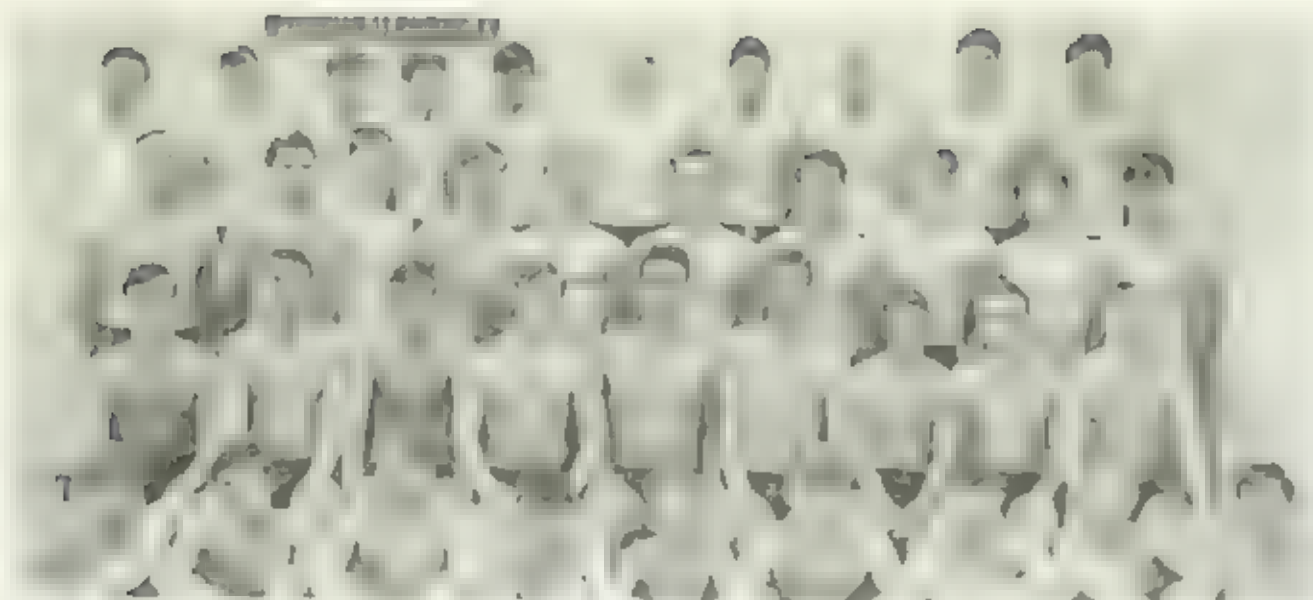

The grapplers, however, are more successful at gaining skill than EF co-eds are at losing weight. Coach Pat Wyka and his fourteen varsity wrestlers compiled a record of nine win and two losses for the 1967-1968 season. The two losses were to Melvindale and Ypsilanti, which was rated number three in the state. Edsel Ford matmen earned third place ranking in the Garden City Invitationals, a meet in which eighteen class A schools participated. Several near losses, however, are hidden by this impressive record. The Dearborn High match was one of the season's most hard-fought battles. The Pioneers were running away with the meet when the T-Birds rallied, winning the last six matches and downing Dearborn 23-16.

The 'T-Birds' success can be attributed to the returning lettermen who played an important part in the '67-'68 campaign and their hours of practice in "the sweat-box."

qualify for State Meet*

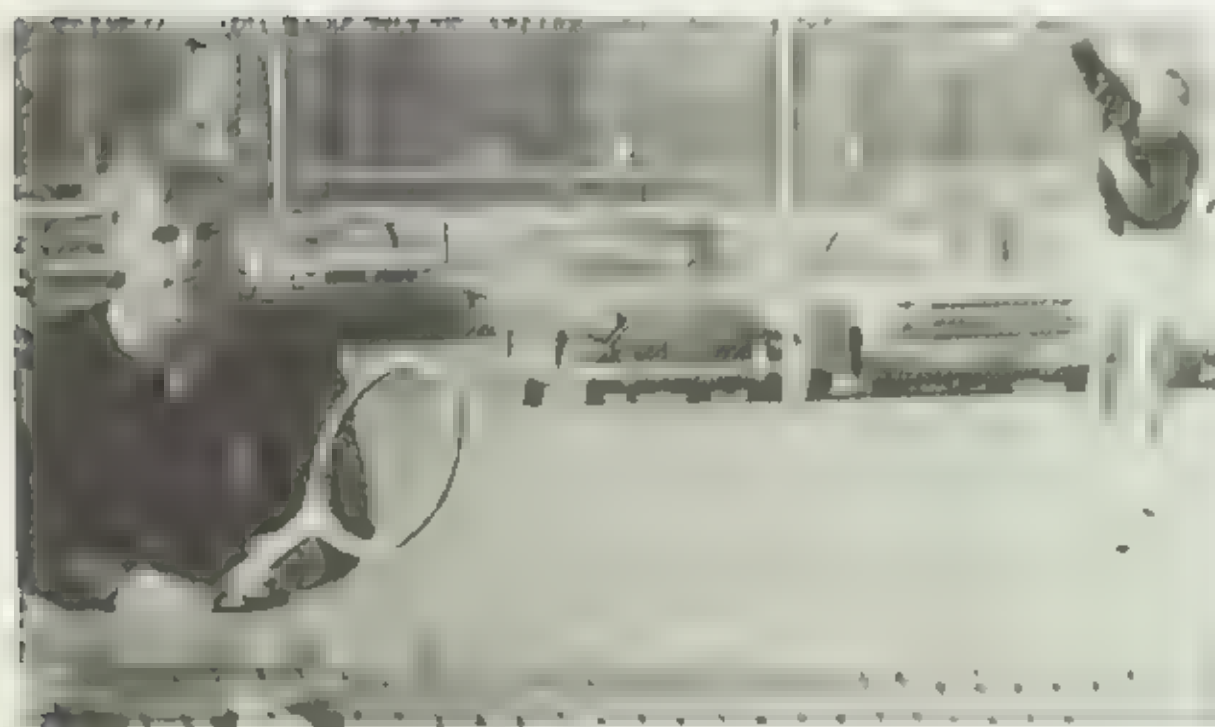

Why would anyone with any sense volunteer to spend three or more hours in an over-chlorinated, ice-cold swimming pool, while being put through pre-planned, grueling workouts? The reason is simple – to become a member of Edsel Ford's swimming team!

Under the strong guiding hand of Coach Fred Evans and with the leadership of co-captains Tom Liddie, Dennis Vogel, and Ross Lindsay, the tankers were forged into swimmers. The team did its best and took second place in the league. However, this training paid off even more for Tom Liddie, swimming the 200 and 400 yard free style, Stuart Baker, swimming the individual medley, and diver Jim MacBeth, who qualified to compete in the State Meet. Although many members of the team graduate, Coach Evans is hoping that next year . . .

climaxes day of travel for EF students

"Now is the winter of our discontent" were the first words 108 Edsel Ford students heard as the lights in the Elizabethan theater dimmed, and the Duke of Gloucester appeared on stage. The performance, a production of King Richard III, climaxed a day of bus riding and restaurant searching for the three busloads of students.

The bus ride was an adventure in itself as the students passed the time by back-seat driving, singing, knitting, and reading Huckleberry Finn. Three hours after leaving Edsel, the caravan arrived in Stratford, Ontario, and the students were faced with a problem — food.

The group headed into town to find a solution. Some found the answer and had a unique experience at the "Black Swan," where they were entertained by Shakespearean actor Cedric Smith. After lunch, the students returned to the theater to view the Shakespearean tragedy. The three-hour play was followed by a question and answer period which was quite humorous in contrast to the violence-filled performance. Then it was back to the restaurant searching, back-seat driving, singing, and Edsel standing ovation to murder mystery cast

"Eeeeeeeeeeek!" The scream came from the audience, not the stage. Audience reaction such as this was not unusual on the evenings of November 9 and 10, as a cast of EF students put on Ten Little Indians as the all-school play. As eight characters met their deaths, audience participation was justified, for recalling that plays are fiction did little good as the auditorium was completely darkened, the spotlight suddenly shifted to a bloody corpse, and the members of the audience gripped their seats and let out piercing screams. The members of the cast were no longer fellow students, but suspects to be feared. For five minutes, George Spooner was a madman, intent on murder, as faces grew pale in the audience. But when the houselights went on, the audience managed to recover to give the cast a standing ovation.

Musical

Criminal coalition plots destruction of Superman

In Superman, a parasite who uses the frailty of the human race to satisfy his ego? Is he an ostentatious do-gooder who wears a flashy costume to draw attention to his good acts?

These vicious accusations are framed by two citizens of Metropolis—Max Mencken, a conceited columnist for The Daily Planet, and Abner Sedgwick, a ten-time Nobel Prize loser who desires revenge against mankind. Unaware that Max (Mark Sawyer) and Sedgwick (George Spooner) are plotting to discover his secret identity, the naive Superman is baffled by the charges raised against him. Even more disquieting to him is the fact that his shy love for Lois Lane (Linda Marley) is being contested by Sedgwick's cynical lab assistant (Rick Turpin).

In solving the conflict, Superman finds that he is indeed abnormal: he re-dedicates his life to "doing good."

LEFT: The props for the play are made to look like comic strip boxes. Clark Kent (Richard Dixon) and Lois Lane (Linda Marley) exchange a few remarks as student director Joanne Black looks on. RIGHT: The sarcastic Sydney (Diane Bernardin) "tells off" the conceited Max (Mark Sawyer) as she scily sings, "Ooh! Do You Love You?"

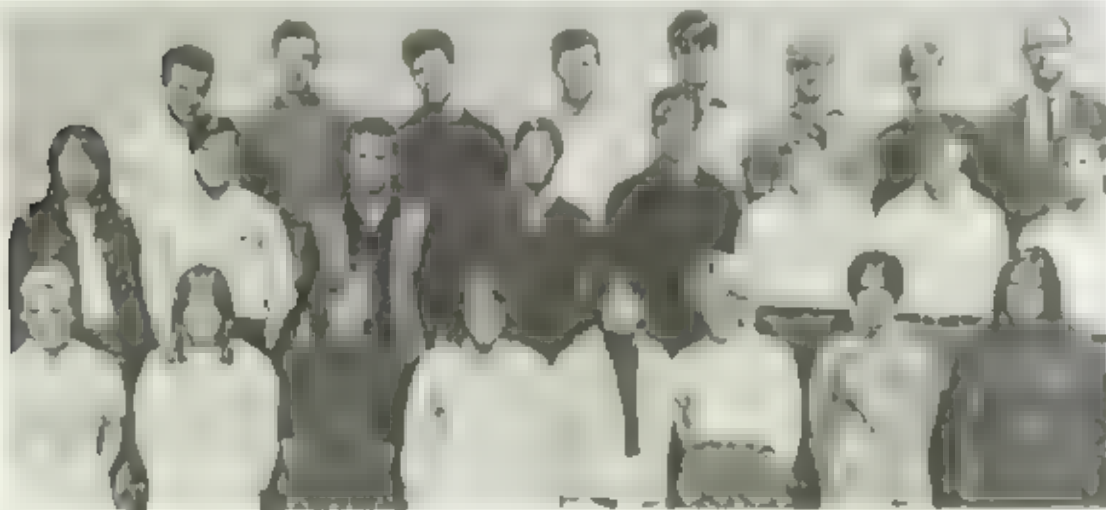

Dr. Abner Sedgwick, ten-time Nobel Prize loser, attempts to discover Superman's real identity. (George Spooner) interrogated by the doctor (George Spooner).

Hopes rise for

As all ambassadors, Dawn Drafte and Clara Nalli must carefully "briefed" on the countries they will be visiting before their departure.

A game of "spin the globe" is no longer fantasy for Clara Nalli, Dawn Draftz, and Mrs. Jan Leslie, the AFS coordinator

Finalists Draftz, Nalli

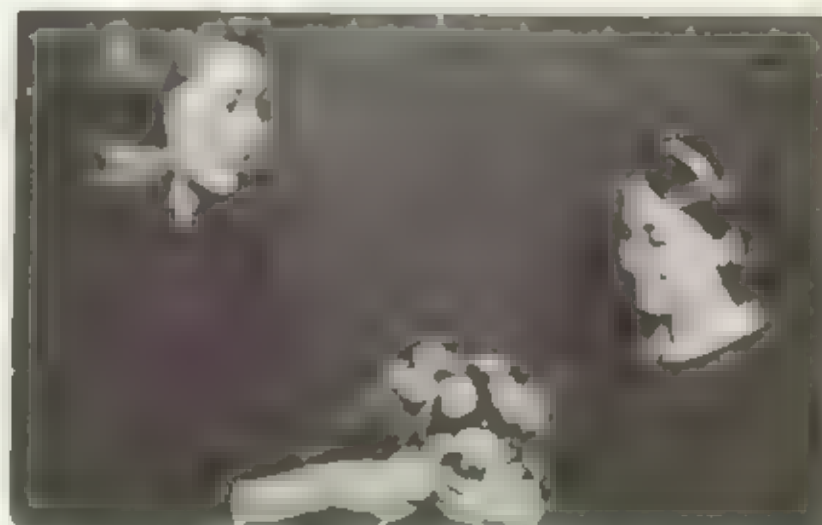

Girls make plans for trips

America's second Open Door policy is being pursued by a nonpolitical organization: the American Field Service. The AFS sponsors international scholarships to 58 countries which provide teenaged ambassadors with "an open door to understanding and friendship."

This year Edsel Ford is sending two "ambassadors" abroad. While Dawn Draftz will spend the school year in a foreign country, Clara Nalli will spend only her summer abroad.

After filling out applications and undergoing hours of interviews, Dawn and Clara were accepted as AFS finalists. Mrs. Jan Leslie, the AFS coordinator, then helped them to review the customs of the countries they will be visiting.

Dawn's and Clara's trips through "the open door" should be fulfilling, adventurous, and, of course unforgettable.

In Europe the practice of giving flowers to the family one visits is traditional. Dawn and Clara will become very familiar with this practice during their stay abroad.

Seniors' spirit brings success

A T-Bird football player crossed the goal line as the score became Edsel 6, Dearborn 0, and hundreds of black and white balloons filled the sky above the Edsel Ford's stadium. The balloons were the idea of the senior class council led by President Mike McCarten. The project was an effort to promote school spirit rather than raise money. It was a success spirit wise, but a failure money-wise. However, loss was worth the results.

The class council spent the rest of the year trying to think of more profitable projects, selecting the class song, colors, and flowers, and planning the Senior Prom, their last activity at Edsel Ford.

Foreign Exchange Students

Bit of Europe Comes to Edsel

Smiling faces' please French student during visit to Edsel

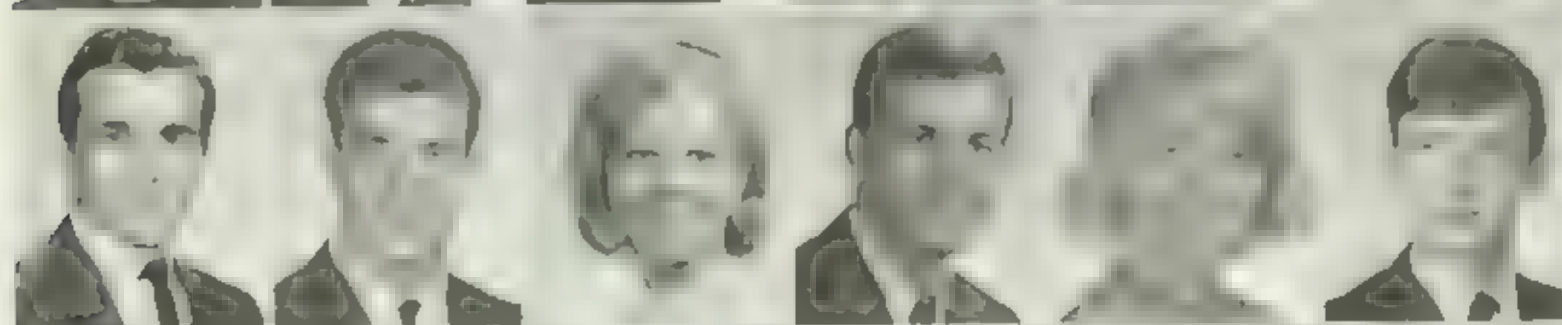

"Sprechen Sie deutsch?" or is it "Parlez-vous francais?" It could be either way for Edsel Ford's two foreign exchange students, Norbert Wustrak, and Didier Prues. Both of them speak English, French, and German. However, there were some words that Norbert and Didier did not learn in their English classes, and they spent their first few days at Edsel looking up words such as "goof-off" and "fink", but it wasn't long before they became used to the American slang. Norbert Wustrak, an eighteen-year-old senior from Braunschweig, Germany, came to the U.S. as part of the American Field Service program. Didier Prues is a seventeen-year-old senior from Clermont Ferrand, France. At the end of the year, the two will leave the U.S. and as Didier says, "all the smiling faces."

Homecoming

Grignon reigns over festivities as queen of wintery '67 Homecoming

Team pleases queen, alumni with third season victory

Throughout the second half of the game, Debbie Soens, Dick Reed, and Queen Judy Grignon sit on the sidelines, awaiting the outcome

Being crowned by Mayor Hubbard as part of the Homecoming court is a thrill for Karen Kitzmann. Karen's escort, Dennis Aylward looks on

The air was frigid, but the girls stood poised in their colorful gowns while the announcer carried out the afternoon Homecoming ceremonies.

This year's festivities did not follow the usual pattern set by previous years. There was no rain or snow as might have been expected, but the temperature dropped to an icy low, and Queen Judy Grignon and her court of Cathie Johnson, Karen Kitzmann, Debbie Soens, and Kris Bezaire shivered in their strapless gowns as their convertibles brought them into the stadium. The spectators were quite comfortable in overcoats, wool scarves, and gloves.

However, the cold weather did not prevent the junior boys from parading around the stadium with their first-place float on their shoulders. The huge mixer, including a bowl of foam with the remains of Ypsilanti Braves' heads and feathers, was entitled "Beat 'em." The football team followed the advice and defeated the Braves 33-13.

reflect thoughts, opinions of E F students

Taught that a writer is an artist who sometimes uses imagery to paint a sensory picture, some imaginative Edsel Ford students decide to try their hand at the art of writing. The artist's creation must be displayed, however, if it is to be of lasting value. Edsel Ford's literary magazine, the Pear Tree, is the showcase in which the work of student writers is displayed. The 1968 literary publication was produced through the combined efforts of advisers Miss Evelyn Pugh, Mr. Stephen Vafeas, Miss Joyce Wahlstrom, and several staff members under student editor Karen Ledebuhr. The staff had an added task this year, choosing the illustrations to be printed, making this year's Pear Tree a showcase of art to be seen and art to be read.

January Senior Class Officers

Edsel's smallest class graduates in January

"Smallest class tries hardest" has been the motto of the graduating class of January, 1968 since it entered Edsel. The class first proved itself by taking first place in the float contest in 1965, as 10A's. Since then the class has been having money-making projects so that they can be sure that the small group will be able to leave a gift to the school at graduation. This way, future classes will not forget that the class of a little over 70 members really did exist.

"Why don't we have a dance?" "How about selling candy?" "A student-faculty basketball game would be fun." Suggestions like these came pouring in to the January senior class council, as the seniors attempted to raise money. Organizing the suggestions was the problem of the class officers, President Dennis Vogel, Vice-President Timothy Nowicki, Treasurer Janet Ware, and Secretary Eileen Nahina. As it turned out, the class sponsored all three projects this year, and all were successes. It will be a long time before anyone forgets the class that tried hardest, the graduates of January, 1968.

"Right about there," says Eileen Nahina to Dennis Vogel in putting up the decorations for the January Class dance, "Fall into Winter."

in 'Starlight and Snowflakes' for graduates

Although "Starlight and Snowflakes" did not fall upon graduates the night of the prom, the January thaw and cloudy skies did not prevent the "small but mighty" class from creating that atmosphere in the Greenfield Room. After choosing Dennis Vogel as president for three years, the class chose him to lead them again in their final activity as king of the prom. Eileen Nahina was chosen as queen. Other members of the "royal family" were Juliann Talerico, Tim Nowicki, Donna Cattell, Wayne Sauchuck, Pat Wilkie, John Julian, Ellie Puggini, and Ron Putnam. Because this was the final mid-year prom, it marked the last time that "Starlight and Snowflakes" would fall upon an Edsel Ford graduating class.

For being chosen president and king, Dennis Vogel receives congratulations from Mr. James Shaker, Janet Ware, and Mr. Ford Haskins.

Senior Party

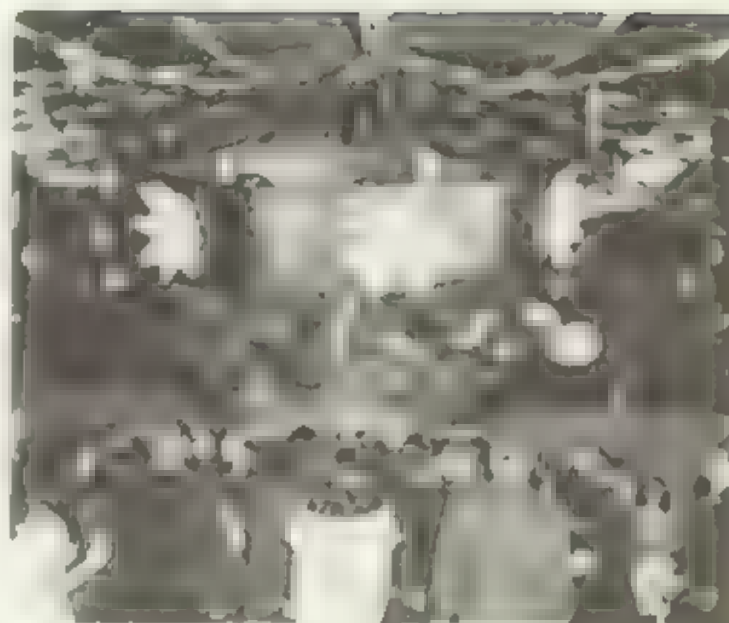

Balloons shower

upon January graduates

Unique has been the word for the "small but mighty" graduating class of January, 1968 since it became part of the Edsel Ford student body in February, 1965. To receive recognition, the class of 74 members has had to try harder so that it would not be overshadowed by the larger classes of more than 500. The class remained unique even in their final class activity at EFHS, the senior party.

Instead of employing a band as classes in the past have, the '68ers were entertained by a folk singing group. The girls' gym classes in square dancing paid off, as members of the class tried to square dance, some rather reluctantly. The evening climaxed in a shower of balloons as a string was pulled and hundreds of balloons fell upon the "small but mighty" class gathered in T-Bird Hall for the last time.

As if falling from the sky, the cafeteria overflows with balloons and seniors who have one idea in mind, to enjoy themselves at their last activity.

Three students enter the auditorium before the commencement exercises begin. Kathy Prince, David Pittenger, and Judy Grignon reflect upon the past three years.

Waltigry, Grignon, and Gilda Orr remember the past and envision the future. At the January commencement, the graduates will share their plans — for some, marriage, for others, jobs, and for others, further education.

Opening the January 1958 Commencement exercises, President Frank S. Adams presides in center. Guest speaker is Dr. W. B. Smith, Jr., of the University of Chicago. Mr. Adams is seated at right, and Mr. Smith is seated at left. The graduates are seated in the background.

Yearbook Advisor: Mrs. Ellnor Patouhas
Photography Advisor: Mr. Lee Bartlett
Business Manager: Mr. Robert Dalton

Acknowledgements

A good yearbook tells the story of the school year -- of the organizations, activities, and people involved.

In terms of actual production, the 1968 Flight staff spent many hours in the Production Rooms (A 22 and A 14) after school hours. The task of producing the book would not have been possible, however, without the time, interest, effort, and cooperation of many other people in addition to the regular staff members.

Special appreciation and thanks are accorded foremost to Mrs. Ellnor Patouhas, yearbook adviser; Mr. Lee Bartlett, photography adviser; and Mr. Robert Dalton, business manager.

Members of the yearbook staff are also indebted to Mr. Leonard Stolfo who printed much of the Flight stationary; to Miss Jane Jennings who allowed the staff to use her room as the Flight office for a semester; and to the Student Assembly representatives who sold the yearbook.

In addition, the 1968 yearbook staff expresses its sincere thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Mack Suprunowicz of Modern Yearbook Company, who helped with the layouts for the introduction, made numerous suggestions and helped to take care of almost an infinite number of tiny details.

Finally, the members of the 1968 Flight staff are especially grateful for the cooperation of students and faculty members who were inconvenienced on several occasions when pictures were taken or information needed to write copy.

It was only with the understanding, effort, and help of these people that the Flight staff was able to tell the story of Edsel Ford's school year, 1967-68.

Years of memories follow graduates

beyond Edsel Ford

The student approaches his last days at Edsel Ford nostalgically. It all started less than six hundred days earlier. The memories return to him: searching for a room the first day of school, studying the Hopi Indians, the "Welcome Wiggle," the first report card, the league championships, the junior prom, the TTB Art Humanities wood sculpture, the teachers' strike, buying senior rings, exchanging senior pictures, signing yearbooks, the crowds screaming, "We're from Edsel Ford, couldn't be prouder . . .," the smell of popcorn that filled the hall the day of a home game, sitting through a rainy, cold football game, the sight of black and white balloons filling the air as the scoreboard recorded another six points for the T-Birds. Each student has his own memories to cherish. Each has some memories that he wishes to forget. But his time to accumulate memories of Edsel Ford comes to an end. The crowds of the university and the metropolis await him. Tomorrow awaits him. The individual is ready for tomorrow.

Outside world challenges individuality

The individual is an interpretation of his society. In a world of conflict and conformity, he is challenged to preserve his individuality--and integrity.

June,

To the west random call on counter in the school. He been great watching ya. mark up my winning talkies this year. Very few of answered right but to what. Stay cool this summer & and enjoy every moment of it because you'll soon be a junior.
won't see ya next year.

June - you are really a bright girl + excellent at work. Keep up the good work. We go next year in June

June,

Even though I've known
you since seventh grade, this year has been the one that I've gotten to know you best. I know that you will be a success, so you've got a lot ahead of you. It's been a lot of fun, and I only hope that in the future we can have as much fun as we did this year and I hope we get to know each other better still. Good luck, even though you don't need it.

June
To a real neat girl
with a great sense of humor.
Don't lose it or Wally will bug you to death. Good Luck
Jim

June,
To a swell girl who I had the pleasure knowing for ^{the} past ~~unpt~~ ^{years}. You are a very successful and worth knowing girl.
Stay your sweet self and remember me!

June,
What a character
you turned out to be. In know you were so quiet well I hope you get what you want & whatever you do, do your best. Good luck
& Good Bye you

June
To a girl with a great (wapped) sense of humor. Keep up the fun playing and see you in kind next year. Have lots of fun this summer. Good luck,
Dickie
